Washington (AP)—In a speech recalling the recent drought relief conference, President Hoover today congratulated the Red Cross for its work in that disaster and for its dependence upon voluntary assistance exclusive of federal charity.

Mr. Hoover, who is president of the relief organization, declared it had again been put to a severe test "not only as to practical ability to meet national disasters but a test of the whole moral and spiritual purpose."

"You have, under most difficult handicaps," he said, "again demonstrated that it can meet and relieve human suffering in any national disaster."

The Red Cross would have been rendered impotent in the face of every future national emergency, the president said, if it had yielded to the demands of the Democrats and Republican Independents in the senate for a $25,000,000 federal appropriation to be administered by it.

"It would have been a step on the pathway of government doles," and would have destroyed the spirit of voluntary service upon which the Red Cross was founded, he said.

James I. Fieger, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations, said almost 800,000 families had received help from the Red Cross during the drought and that more than two-thirds of these have been restored to independence through farm loans or intermediate credit facilities.

"The drought victims are again smiling the smile," he added, "and the country is again under cultivation and will play an important part in the reestablishment of national prosperity."

Fieger added the recent congressional discussion "has given us something that we have needed for a long time."

"We have accepted the Red Cross with complete dignity and honor," he said. "A little argumentation between friends is a good thing. In this instance it has stirred our patriotic fervor. The Red Cross has more clearly emerged as something to fight for as it stands alongside Old Glory."

Address in Part

The partial text of the president's address follows:

"The drought presented a new type of problem for the Red Cross—the problem of famine in over two millions of people. Your leaders, alive to the possibility of suffering which would be the inescapable result during the winter, began as early as last August to mobilize the Red Cross to meet the inevitable disaster. It was that far-sighted action and that early action which enabled the saving of this multitude of people from infinite suffering."

"Unfortunately, men less familiar with the resources and the ability and the courage of the American people in mutual action under their own Red Cross, men no doubt genuinely concerned over the growing seriousness of the situation, were

Illinois Dry Law Repeal
Measure Fails To Obtain
Approval Of Gov. Emmerson

Springfield, Ill. (AP)—Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today vetoed the bill for the repeal of the Illinois search and seizure laws.

The measure would have placed Illinois sixth in the column of states repealing their prohibition enforcement acts. The state senate passed it by only a two vote margin, 26 to 24. For more than two decades the state senate has been traditionally dry, while the house has thrice passed repeal bills. The vote in the house was 91 for 56 against.

Emmerson branded the effort of Evansville, Ill. (AP)—The American flag was raised at Frances Willard cottage, home of the national W. C. T. U., when word came today of the veto of the Illinois prohibition repeal measure.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the temperance union, sent telegram to Governor Emmerson reading: "Congratulations. You have stayed the onslaught against the constitution. Illinois is still a loyal state. Your veto has made history. You have been true to the Lincoln tradition."

Illinois "wets" to strike all prohibition laws from the state statute books, as nullificationism.

His veto message will be sent to the general assembly tomorrow.

"I am not for nullification," the governor's message said. "This act not only removes all laws on this subject but it strikes at the fundamental unity of national government."

"... Its effect would be to leave Illinois, for the first time in its history, without any state law for the control or regulation of intoxicating liquors."

Cedar Rapids

BULLETIN

Cedar Rapids, Iowa (AP)—Two companies of Iowa National guardsmen who gathered here at 130 A. M. for possible service against Cedar-cow cattle testing opponents were ordered demobilized at noon.

Des Moines, Iowa (AP)—Gov. Dan Turner went into conference with several legislators regarding the cattle testing situation at Tipton, as soon as he reached his office this morning.

He planned to leave for Iowa City at 9 o'clock A. M., to meet with leaders of the group of objectors.

Adjutant General W. H. Barry said at 8:45 a. m. he had received no orders to mobilize any units of the Iowa National guard for service at Tipton, although Sheriff Foster Maxson of Cedar-cow has reported the situation beyond his control.

Meanwhile, the Cedar Rapids National guard unit, acting on its own initiative, had mobilized, ready to go to Tipton should orders be received. The farmers on several occasions have, through superior numbers, prevented veterinarians from carrying on their work.

Representative F. W. Elliott of Davenport, introduced in the state house of representatives today a resolution expressing "condemnation of the attitude of opponents of the test and pledging the legislature's support in enforcement of the law."

REDUCE SENTENCES TO OBEY COURT'S ORDER

Kenosha (AP)—New sentences were passed on two Kenosha men today in accordance with a supreme court order which called for lighter penalties than the 20 to 39 year terms recently imposed.

Guy Ferrugini, 31, must serve 5 to 6 years in Waupun, and Jasper Luitze, 38, from 4 to 5 years. They were convicted of robbing a jewelry store here in May, 1930.

They appealed the first sentence, the supreme court upholding them in the contention the 29-year penalty was excessive. They were returned from Waupun today for resentencing.

Several Nicaraguan Work-

by Rebels

BULLETIN

Washington (AP)—Secretary Adams announced today the cruiser Memphis had been ordered from Guantanamo, Cuba, to a position near Nicaraguan waters for use if the rebel movement in Nicaragua should become serious.

Panama City (AP)—Admiral received by officials of the Standard Fruit Steamship company at Cristobal today said three United States marines were killed in an attack by a large force of bandits on the commissary at Logtown, Nicaragua, seven miles from Puerto Cabezas.

The three marines listed as killed in the report to the steamship company were Captain Harland Peffey, Lieutenant Darrah and Sergeant Taylor. Several native employees of the commissary were also killed, the report said. The report to the steamship company said that the engagement took place early Sunday morning between a national guard patrol, led by the three marine officers, and a force of bandits in which the three officers and the entire national guard force was wiped out. It was a desperate hand-to-hand battle, the report said, in which the marines and national guardsmen were overpowered only after their ammunition was exhausted.

The advice said that Captain Peffey, U. S. M. C., and one Nicaraguan National guard officer had been killed but that reports of other mortalities were not substantiated. One marine was captured.

The fighting was said to have started with a surprise attack by bandits on a fruit ranch near the town during which several American civilians were reported to have been killed or captured. The battle was resumed Sunday when a marine force was sent out with a native force and was surrounded by the bandits.

Appeals for aid were sent to Managua and plans set out to bomb the bandits' hiding places.

JACK DEMPSEY TO FILE
ACTION FOR DIVORCE

Reno, Nev. (AP)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, admitted through his manager today that he is in Reno for a divorce and that he was sent here by his wife Estelle Taylor, motion picture actress.

Dempsey, who left his hotel early this morning and was not due to return until later in the day, authorized his manager, Leonard Sachs to make the statement regarding his divorce plans.

"Dempsey is still sincerely in love with his wife," Sachs said. "But she desires a stage and an operatic career and she felt that he was in her way in this respect. She asked for a divorce, so he politely stepped out of the scene and came here. His divorce complaint will be a very mild character, probably alleging incompatibility. It is expected that Mrs. Dempsey will file an appeal, and make no contest and the whole affair will be over."

Dublin, Irish Free State (AP)—Joseph McGrath, director of the Irish hospital sweepstakes, said today there was no truth in statements that a million sweep tickets had been seized by customs officials in New York.

"The man may have had a book or two," he said, "and they made a million of it."

New York authorities said they found the tickets several days ago in the baggage of D. Fish, who described himself as a theatrical producer. Each ticket was valued at $2.50 and was said to represent the largest seizure of its kind in the port of New York.

TO REPLACE HIM
WITH REPUBLIC

Will Enforce Demands if King Doesn't Accept
Them, is Ultimatum

BULLETIN

Paris (AP)—A telephone message from Madrid to Reuters' agency tonight said that the Spanish cabinet decided to resign.

Madrid (AP)—Flushed with victory over the monarchists in yesterday's elections, Don Niceto Alcalá Zamora and the group of republican leaders who proclaimed a revolution in Spain last December, late this afternoon formally demanded that Alfonso recognize the Spanish republic.

In a note signed by all the signatories of last December's revolutionary proclamation, the republicans declared that "Sunday's elections signify an expression of the public will for an immediate republic in Spain."

"If the king does not accept the dictates of the public," the manifesto continues, "we are ready to enforce them and to establish a republic ourselves."

The manifesto continues with the prediction that the Spanish people and those in foreign countries will be the judges of the merits of the republicans' threatened action, if necessary.

King Alfonso was considering what action the government should take in a situation gravely threatening the throne, brought about by the republican victory in yesterday's municipal elections.

In the opinion of qualified observers, the king has three possible courses of action:

1. To continue the district and then the parliamentary elections either under Premier Juan Bautista Aznar or a new government.
2. To establish another military dictatorship. This might mean an immediate general strike, revolution and civil war.
3. To abdicate.

3 Ministers Resign

The crisis was brought to a head today by the resignation of three ministers of the present cabinet.

The three ministers, Count Cande de Romanones, minister of state, U. C. Marquis de Albuñuelas, minister of justice, and Minister of Education, Gascon Marin, handed their resignations to King Alfonso, declaring they could no longer serve in the government.

Count Romanones told the king that the republican victory was "disastrous" and that he could no longer continue in the cabinet. He added "I will not serve in a government of force."

This declaration was construed to mean that monarchistic circles are considering the establishment of a military dictatorship which Romanones refused to approve.

A report that Premier Aznar has also offered his resignation could not be confirmed. It was said that efforts were being made to hold up all resignations until the king and the government could decide upon a program.

Held as Killer

Not Guilty
Plea Made
By Hagenah

Madison (AP)—A plea of "not guilty" was entered in superior court here today by William J. Hagenah, Chicago, vice president of the Bylesby Management and Engineering corporation, when he was arraigned on charges of violating the state lobby law. Preliminary examination was set for April 28.

The complaint against Mr. Hagenah has two counts, one alleging he hired Paul Ralphe, Chippewa Falls as a lobbyist and failed to register him, and the other alleging a similar charge regarding employment of Elhan B. Miner, New Richmond.

The charges grew out of an alleged attempt to bribe Sen. Peter J. Smith, Eau Claire, for his vote on utility bills last February and were reported to the senate by Gov. Philip LaFollette. A subsequent investigation by a senate committee established that Ralphe and Miner, both former assemblymen, were employed by Mr. Hagenah. The committee said the matter of prosecution rested with the attorney general and Dane county district attorney.

Mr. Hagenah's arraignment was completed in short order today. The only delay was a short clash over the matter of bail, which Judge S. B. Schein set at $5,000. He provided bond.

PREMIER PREPARING

London (AP)—Fresh from the calm atmosphere of his homeland hills at Lossiemouth, Prime Minister MacDonald arrived in London today ready for the battle which is promised in the after-easter session of parliament beginning tomorrow.

He found the prospects for a very close vote on the motion to censure his government when the matter is brought up next Thursday. It was believed that Liberals were likely to support the government in sufficient numbers to avoid a defeat and consequent general elections.

$200,000 LOSS
AT WIS. RAPIDS
AS FIRE RESULT

Large Area Hit by Flames—
Million Dollar Loss at Menominee, Mich.

Wisconsin Rapids (AP)—Fanned by high winds, one of the worst fires in the history of Wisconsin Rapids swept over an area approximately 10 blocks in length and three blocks wide yesterday, burning numerous buildings. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

Fire departments from several nearby cities aided in fighting the blaze. More than a thousand volunteers fought alongside seasoned firefighters before the flames were brought under control.

A grass fire spread to the Standard Oil company warehouse and consumed the building, gasoline and oil, valued at $75,000. Exploding oil and gasoline tossed embers into the air and they were blown to other buildings, setting them afire. Six dwellings and numerous other buildings were destroyed. Lack of water hampered the firemen.

Charles Krueger, 75, suffered a heart attack during the excitement and dropped dead.

LUMBER CONCERN BURNS

Menominee, Mich. (AP)—A fire of undetermined origin that destroyed a lumber yard and three dwellings here and two buildings across the Menominee river at Marinette, Wis., with a loss estimated at more than $1,000,000, were under control shortly after 9 o'clock a. m. today.

The A. W. Wells Lumber mills and yards were destroyed. Embers from the blaze, carried on a stiff breeze, spread to 50 houses here. Three were destroyed. Across the river at Marinette, an ice house owned by City Treasurer George E. Cleary was burned along with a shack.

Fire equipment was rushed to Menominee and Marinette from Green Bay, Wis., and Escanaba, Mich.

About 30,000,000 feet of lumber and 2,000,000 feet of saw logs were included in the loss. The saw mills, the hardwood flooring plant, dry kilns, stables were destroyed.

FAIR BUILDINGS BURN

Chippewa Falls, Wis. (AP)—The grandstand on the Northern Wisconsin state fair grounds stood today in the midst of the smoldering ruins of all other major structures on the tract, swept by a $50,000 fire. Five residences nearby also were in ashes.

The fire was believed to have been caused by a cigarette carelessly thrown into dry grass near the fair grounds yesterday afternoon. Borne on a strong wind, the flames swept to the fair buildings and spread quickly. The Chippewa fire department was given aid by Eau Claire apparatus. A company of national guardsmen, boy scouts and scores of citizens joined the fight, but were unable to check the blaze until the larger buildings were consumed and the five dwellings razed.

$45,000 LOSS AT GREEN BAY

Green Bay (AP)—Fire starting from a grass fire Saturday evening destroyed five buildings in the town of Preble. The old Hagenah Brewing company property just back of the old baseball park here. The loss is estimated at $45,000.

The first building destroyed was used to store paint and tar valued at about $5,000, the blaze setting fire to the other buildings. Three of the buildings were owned by the old Hagenah Brewing company and the remaining two by the Preble Realty company.

Seven Dead
In Crashes
Of Planes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Airplane accidents caused the deaths of seven pilots or their passengers Sunday.

George Weln, chief pilot for the Curtiss Wright airport at Milwaukee, and his mechanic, Carl Jantz, were killed when a control wire snapped on their plane and sent them crashing 300 feet to the ground.

The right wing of the craft piloted by Corin A. Munson, 30, buckled in a left bank was attempted, and Munson and W. H. Portman, 23, were killed at Houston, Texas.

At Solus, N. Y., Hugh Shipley, Putneyville farmer, and Homer Potvin, garage employee, riding in a plane piloted by Robert Loepe, were killed in a fall from an altitude of 300 feet. Loepe was uninjured, but so nervous following the fall that he could not give a coherent account of the fatal dive.

Walter Frick, 26, secretary of the Gray Eagle flying service of Marion, Ill., was killed when stunting at the Marion airport. He nose-dived from an altitude of 1,000 feet and when he tried to level at 200 feet, the motor misfired.

William Davis, 47, suffered a fractured skull and a crushed right leg in a fall of 100 feet before 4,000 spectators at Haskinsville, N. J. He was flying one of five airplanes of French manufacture brought to this country by Charles Levine.

Milwaukee (AP)—A change of wind today brought a feeling of security to northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan, scourged by a series of devastating forest fires during the weekend.

The shifting wind whipped lashing flames into a stubborn retreat onto burnt-over areas after flames raged wildly yesterday, to razed the village and consume hundreds of isolated farm buildings. All reported blazes were controlled except near Crandon, where a dying fire during the night flared today along a six-mile front, forestry officials said.

Only three buildings remained standing in Wallace, Mich. The entire population of 150 was forced to flee, many without any of their belongings. As flames leaped through the village yesterday.

A shortage of snow climaxed the drought of last summer and timber areas, sucked dry of moisture, lapped up flames eagerly. A heavy wind whirled the fire through cut-over and forest lands with unusual speed.

Hundreds of forest rangers and volunteer workers patrolled smoldering areas, guarding against new outbreaks and curbing threatening fires.

Guard Fire Front

Crandon and Laona, Wis., residents, preparing to leave their homes last night, today, breathed easier, but all available men were at the fire front.

Telephone communication, disrupted in several Michigan and Wisconsin counties as fire toppled telephone poles, was gradually restored to normal.

At Lena, Wis., the fire raged into town burning the telephone exchange and three other buildings. One building was destroyed at Oconto, Peshtigo, walled in for a short time by flames, escaped a repetition of the forest fire disaster in 1871 when 1,000 persons burned to death.

It was reported that buildings on about 24 farms in Juneauco burned down in marsh and timber fires along the Yellow and Wisconsin rivers. The blazes started about six miles north of Mauston and burned in patches for about 30 miles to the north border.

Attempts to back proved boomerangs in some instances when they, two, got beyond control.

The town hall and 13 houses burned at Tripoli, Wis.

Fires were quickly brought under control in Onelia, Langlade, Douglas, Ashland and Lincoln counties as the wind abated. Two farmers at Pelican Lake saved their furniture by rowing it out on the water in boats. Three Pence lake families, made homeless by the fires, were being cared for at Antico-co jail today.

One of the worst fires in the history of Wisconsin raged within a mile and a half mile respectively of the cities of Crandon and Lena. Flames that towered 150 feet in the

No Tangible Claws In Kidnaping Of Wisconsin Brewery Owner

FAMILY ASKS OFFICIALS TO DROP SEARCH

Communication from Abductors of Fred J. Blumer Is Long Overdue

Monroe, Wis.—(AP)—Silence on the part of officials and relatives of Fred J. Blumer, missing brewer, led interested persons to believe today that attempts were being made to negotiate with the men allegedly holding Blumer for $150,000 ransom.

Monroe, Wis.—(AP)—Relatives and business associates of Fred J. Blumer, 50-year-old brewer held for ransom, still waited today for some word from his abductors. The police search for the kidnapers and their victim continued, but the authorities were admittedly without tangible clues.

Apparently fearing for Blumer's life, members of his family yesterday requested Green-co authorities to discontinue the hunt. This gave rise to the belief some development in the case would come shortly. The kidnapers, promised communication was long overdue.

Chicago police investigators remained on the trail, however, working on the theory Blumer was held by remnants of Fred Burke's gang. His sides, they said, may have kidnapped the man in an attempt to raise a defense fund for their chief. Burke, titled "the most dangerous man in America," is awaiting trial in Michigan for murder.

Illinois highway police were ordered to search every questionable resort near Freeport and Rockford, Ill., on the theory gangsters were hiding him in the region. Blumer's car was found in Freeport. First information regarding the kidnaping came from that city in a telephone call demanding $150,000 ransom.

A few hours after Blumer disappeared last Thursday night, A. C. Wells, secretary-treasurer of the Blumer Products Co., of which the missing man is president, received the call. He was told a further message would come within 48 hours. Saturday a letter from Chicago, signed "Unemployed Guys" and requesting the ransom to $100,000 was received in Monroe. Sheriff Myron West expressed the opinion it was a hoax.

Chicago police had under surveillance, Martin O'Leary, hoodlum, and reputed Burke henchman. They indicated they were ready to stage a series of raids on possible hide-outs where Blumer might be held.

RACINE ELECTS FIRST SOCIALIST AS MAYOR

Racine—(AP)—Although there are only 75 on the party roster, Socialists have given staid Racine its first Socialist mayor-elect—William Swoboda, 33-year-old Bohemian.

While old heads shake doubtfully as they contemplate Racine under Socialist direction, the younger generation who knows "Bill" Swoboda has no fears of radical change under his sponsorship.

"Bill" is a peculiar sort of a Socialist. In fact, by his own admission, he leans toward Socialism generally, but specifically his idea on how a city should be run are not much different from persons of other politics. To climax it all, "Bill" is a capitalist of a sort. He runs the Chicago Wholesale Fruit and Vegetable Merchant, Inc., operating two stores in Racine and one in Kenosha.

Swoboda said he became a Socialist partisan after his return from France where he served in the world war. But he has been a member of the party only a little more than a year.

Swoboda said he contemplated no "clean sweep" of the city offices and that the first thing he would attempt would be to find employment for the jobless.

"While I am mayor and while there is a single dollar in the treasury," he said, "there is not going to be a starving child in Racine."

RASKOB ASKED TO QUIT HELM OF HIS PARTY

Women's Democratic Group Hears Attack on Stand Against Dry Law

Washington—(AP)—A demand for the resignation of Chairman Raskob of the Democratic national committee was made today by Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, chairman of the National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement league.

In her keynote address before the biennial convention of the league, Mrs. Nicholson asserted a drive would be made to have organized Democratic women desert the party unless a new leader were chosen.

The attack against Raskob was started shortly after the meeting convened by Dr. Jennie M. Callias of Omaha, Neb., who resigned as a Democratic national committee woman in 1928 in protest of the nomination of Governor Smith.

"Mr. Raskob is not a true Democrat," Callias said, "and anyone Mr. Raskob endorses for the presidency of these United States, the dry elements of the party will oppose."

Mrs. Nicholson said the Democratic Women's league had "organized a following without a penny's expense to the Democratic party leadership, and we are here today to offer the services gratuitously to our party on certain conditions."

"We demand the resignation of the national democratic chairman, John J. Raskob, then a competent leader may be appointed that can unite all factions in the party," she said.

"We cannot and we will not support a candidate offered us by Tammany leadership."

Mrs. Nicholson was interrupted several times by applause.

Want To Back Democrat
The women cheered particularly a statement that "we want to support a Democratic candidate for president—but it can only be done on the basis we suggest."

She added that for the Democratic party to become the liquor party, would tend to divide rather than to unite.

Catherine Vaughn McCulloch, a Chicago lawyer, asserted the Democratic party must remain dry if it hopes for success in 1932.

"If the national Democratic party wishes to deserve success," she said, "it must again declare valiantly its loyalty to the 18th amendment and show that loyalty by nominating presidential and vice presidential candidates who are unequivocally dry."

Many dry Democrats are longing to return to their party in the next presidential election.

Mills Estir Dupre of Louisiana, was applauded when she asserted that "if the Democratic party which has a propaganda of democracy and liberty, and if any man nominated by that party is proposing any modification (or prohibition) whatever, we will not fix the present law, but we assured we will fix them."

The delegate said that though "perhaps you hear very little that is encouraging from our state, except perhaps of the death blow to that great and well known band of rum runner and bootleggers arrested in New Orleans Saturday," she believed that the women of her state would not hesitate "when the testing time comes."

A message from Miss Edna Barnett of Illinois, telling of pleas to Governor Emmerson to veto repeal of state enforcement law, was read amid applause.

Women Visit Hoover

More than 100 of the Democratic women went to the White House later to pay their respects to President Hoover.

"We are constitutional Democrats going to pay our respects to a constitutional president," Mrs. Nicholson said as she mustered the women into line at the executive office.

Mrs. Nicholson added the women's purpose was "to endorse his stand in the past on prohibition."

In the keynote speech before the convention, Mrs. Nicholson described, without naming, four "disqualified wet candidates" for the Democratic nomination. She later told reporters they were Governor Ritchie of Maryland, Governor Roosevelt of New York, Alfred E. Smith and former Senator Reed of Missouri.

To President Hoover Mrs. Nicholson said, "I want to introduce you to those good Democrats who have come a long way to see you."

"Very pleased to see you," President Hoover said as he shook hands with the 200 young Democratic women who said their organization had 200,000 active members.

They left the White House for a luncheon for which the chief speaker was former Senator Owen of Oklahoma.

FIREMEN CALLED OUT EIGHT TIMES

Grass Fires Keep Department Busy Over Week-end—Damage Small

The fire department was called out eight times over the weekend to grass, dump, and rubbish fires. The firemen were kept busy almost continuously fighting fires which threatened nearby buildings. In no case, however, did any serious damage result.

The first call was received at 11 o'clock Saturday morning from Rogers-ave, where a grass fire was burning. Other calls to grass fires were received at 2:25 Saturday afternoon to 701 S. Bond-st; 2:05 Sunday afternoon to 1513 W. Franklin-st; 10:50 Sunday morning, also to 1513 W. Franklin-st; 7:55 Sunday evening, to 724 E. Calumet-st; 8:43 Sunday evening to 724 E. Calumet-st; and 11:40 Sunday night to High Crest-st.

The firemen summoned to 1513 W. Franklin-st at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon remained there until after 6 o'clock battling a stubborn blaze which was burning in a pile of sawdust. Short after 6 o'clock Sunday evening a false alarm was turned in from the corner of College-ave and Richmond-st.

2 REQUIREMENTS IN GOOD PROGRAM FOR INVESTMENT

Buyer Should Insure Diversification and Competent Supervision

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
Copyright 1931, By Cons. Press
(This is the twelfth and last of a series of articles discussing the application of investment principles to present day conditions in business and in securities.)

New York—Whatever investment program is adopted there are two requirements for which there are no substitutes—adequate diversification and competent supervision of securities after they are acquired.

Diversification should extend to the type of securities purchased, that is to say, bonds, stocks, and mortgages. It should extend to the kind of industry represented. The old distinction was between railroad and industrial investments. The latter have more recently been subdivided into industrials proper and utilities. Among the industrials there is need for spreading out the risk over as many fields of enterprises as possible.

Even though the investor is convinced that the package food business, for instance, presents the most attractions at this time he should have only a proportion of his funds tied up in that line. Diversification should include proper geographical distribution. If it is decided to make utilities the leaders on the list, the security buyer should see to it that different sections of the country are covered. In some instances it may be wise to diversify with respect to the dates at which the income is to be received but that is not always necessary.

The matter of supervision is not so easy to deal with. It is never safe to buy stocks or bonds and "put them away and forget them." There is not so much danger if the selections are conservatively made in the first place and yet danger in some degree is always there. Investment conditions are subject to constant change and someone must be responsible for anticipating those changes as far as possible. If the investor is unable to do this for himself, he must find someone to do it for him. Trust companies sell such a service and offer one solution of the problem. Investment bankers also can help. Somehow the supervision must be found.

MISTAKES ALARM FOR MAIL BOX, SO HE CALLS FIREMEN

Mistaking a fire alarm box for a mail box, a blind man about 6:15 Sunday evening summoned the fire department to the corner of College-ave and Richmond-st. The mistake was overlooked when the circumstances were learned. The alarm box from which the call was received is the type which operates by pulling a lever instead of breaking the glass.

Grape Concentrate Firms Subject To Prosecution

Washington—(AP)—An intention to prosecute grape concentrate concerns whenever it can be proved their goods are "sold with an intent that they be used in the manufacture of a beverage which is intoxicating in fact" was reiterated today by Prohibition Director Woodcock.

Woodcock included this statement in a letter made public today by the Washington headquarters of the Crusaders. Both the federal dry chief and Attorney General Mitchell were asked a series of questions by the organization, but only the former replied in detail.

The Crusaders' letter referred particularly to a firm represented in Washington by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant Attorney general.

"In order that the citizens may know what they may properly do within the law," the Crusaders' letter said, "we ask you to state whether the sale of this product is legal, and if so, whether it is also legal to sell kegs for the purpose of making wine which will develop a greater alcohol content than is permitted by the Volstead act."

"The keg has been treated as a part of the apparatus for making liquor and the press has reported many raids in which kegs were seized which had been offered for sale."

Woodcock replied that the question of "intent" was involved, but added that there was "the practical difficulty of the proof of such unlawful intent."

"We have prosecutions against somewhat similar enterprises underway in Los Angeles, Calif., and Kansas City, Mo., he wrote. "Such prosecutions will be made whenever the evidence of such unlawful intent is available to convince a petit jury beyond a reasonable doubt."

The Crusaders pointed out recommendations of the Wickersham commission for a change in Article 29 of the Volstead act, dealing with fruit juices, in order to make the law more consistent. Their letter asked whether "you intend to recommend that the home manufacture of beer be made legal or the home manufacture of wine be made illegal."

$10,000 GIVEN TO LIBRARY FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Anonymous Donor Provides Fund to Be Used for Stack Room

An anonymous gift of $10,000 to the Lawrence college library will be used for construction of a third floor of stack space to accommodate new books, the construction of a fireproof stairway and an electric book lift leading from the basement to the top floor, and additional equipment for this reading and reference room, according to R. J. Watter, business manager of the college. The improvements to the building and equipment follow the recommendations made by the survey staff of the Methodist Board of Education after its examination of the building in the spring of 1930. Remodeling will begin immediately after the commencement exercises in June. It will be completed late in the summer.

This gift is the fourth important contribution made to increase the effectiveness of the college library within the last few years. Three years ago, through the generosity of several Lawrence trustees, a gift of $10,000 made possible the purchase of new books. Begun at about the same time and made possible through other anonymous gifts was the task of cataloging the library's 15,000 volumes. The third important contribution came last June in the form of a gift from the Carnegie Corporation providing $15,000 for the purchase of new books at the rate of $5,000 annually. The Carnegie Corporation had made a previous gift of $2,500 for the purpose of aiding Lawrence in fructifying its experiment in alumni reading and adult education.

Each of the contributions was made in recognition of a specific need of the library service program, and as a result of the generous funds placed at the disposal of authorities the library service has been maintained at an ever-increasing effectiveness.

The survey of the Methodist Board of Education, in reporting on the condition of the library last spring, lauded the efficiency of its program and the effective way in which it served students and faculty, but called attention to the need for more stack room. Since the survey staff made its report the need for more stack room has become more acute in view of the recent additions to the library stock.

THERE is another very definite reason why Miller can come out with the guarantee like this one you see here.

That's saying quite a lot... to guarantee your product to outwear any other, but the product has to warrant such a guarantee or Miller couldn't offer to feature it.

As a Miller dealer, I think I know quite a lot about the Miller G-T-R Tire. Just take the tread compound for instance. I have never seen a tread so tough and so hard to wear out. That's because Miller uses a longer-wearing compound than other tire makers.

Maybe you don't know it, but compound in tires is the same principle as baking bread. Something else besides flour is put in or the dough wouldn't have any life. This something that goes in Miller Tires is what's back of the wear.

Come in today. I'd like to show you these tires. I'll say there's not a better value in town.

Investigate Accident In Which Menasha Resident Is Fatally Hurt

WOMAN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE ON HIGHWAY 114

Sheriff Jensen Probes Accident Near Sherwood Last Night

Mrs. Thelma Gibbs, 35, 316 Third-st., Menasha, was fatally injured about 11:15 last night when she was struck by an automobile driven by Raymond Goss, 165 W. Foster-st., Appleton, on Highway 114 about five miles west of Sherwood. Mrs. Gibbs suffered a fractured skull, possible internal injuries, and cuts and bruises. She died shortly after 11 o'clock this morning.

Sheriff Gerhard Jensen of Calumet-co investigated the crash. The Menasha woman, who was a widow, was riding with John Schlise, Sturgeon Bay, toward Sherwood when their car swerved and went into the ditch. Mrs. Gibbs left the machine and was walking along the highway when she was struck by Goss's car. Goss immediately stopped and took Mrs. Gibbs to St. Elizabeth hospital.

Survivors are two children, Dorothy and Charles, Menasha; her mother, Mrs. Christina Goss, 1814 S. Oneida-st.; four sisters, Mrs. Clarence Miller and Miss Margaret Goss, Appleton; Sister M. Boniface, St. Louis; and Mrs. Charles Burich, Reedsville; four brothers, Martin, Appleton, Paul, Manitowish, Edward, Valders, and Peter, Calumet.

The body was taken to the Schommer Funeral home. It will be taken to the home of her mother at 1814 S. Oneida-st. Tuesday afternoon. Funeral services will be held at the residence at 8:45 Thursday morning and at 9:30 at St. Mary church at Menasha, with the Rev. John Hummel, officiating.

POLICEMEN TO HOLD LAST INDOOR SHOOT

Start Outdoor Work With Pistols, Machine Guns Next Month

The last of the indoor pistol matches for Appleton police department will be held Tuesday afternoon at the Schommer, according to Sgt. Herbert Kapp and Officer Carl Radtke, instructors.

Four types of pistol silhouette targets will be used. They indicate a man preparing to draw a pistol from his hip pocket; the chest, neck and head of a man; the shoulders and head; and that part of a man's head, shoulders and chest which might be considered "killing" area. The latter is the part which, if struck by a bullet, would mean a fatal wound.

The targets will be placed at distances ranging from 30 to 60 feet. Firing will be all double action, the first five shots to be fired with the right hand after drawing from the holster. The shots are to be fired within 12 seconds. The men then will fire five shots with the left hand, the time limit being 15 seconds. The third five shots will be three with the right hand and two with the left 15 seconds being allowed.

Appleton officers now can shoot almost as well with the left hand as the right, it is said, some of them shooting even a bit better with the left. They have learned to fire so as to disable or kill with the weapon and have become proficient enough to easily "wing" a man if he tries to draw on them.

Next month the men will start outdoor work on the government pistol and machine gun range northwest of Appleton. Here they will fire their service pistols at various types of targets from a distance of 25 yards or more.

They also are to receive instruction in use of the Thompson sub-machine gun recently purchased for the department.

RUTH NICHOLS SETS NEW SPEED MARK FOR WOMEN

Detroit—(P)—Ruth Nichols, Rye, N. Y. aviator, set a new speed record for women on a three-kilometer course here this morning with a speed of 210.655 miles per hour. Mrs. Amelia Earhart put down the previous record of 131.157 miles an hour.

Taking off from the Grosse Ile airport at 6:50 a. m. to avoid crosswinds forecast for later in the day, Miss Nichols, flying the Lockheed-Vought plane in which she set the women's speed record last month, sped over an official course laid out near the flying field.

Harry H. Knepper of the National Aeronautical association, checked the flight, and R. A. Leavell, another aeronautical official, timed the race. Knepper said an official recording must be taken from the barograph in her plane that the flight may be certified.

Miss Nichols made two flights, one against strong south wind, the other with the wind. Her speed was determined by averaging the two flights.

WALL STREET WATCHING FOR STOCK RALLY

Professional Traders Believe That Technical Recovery Is Due

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES

Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press Wall Street, New York—(CFA)—The lookouts in the watch towers of Wall Street scanned the horizon all last week for the first sign of a rally in the stock market. Professional opinion is unanimous that a rally is overdue and operations last week were conducted always with the idea that technical recovery might make its appearance at any time.

Only here and there is there an optimist bold enough to suggest that this recovery will be anything more than technical.

For sentiment in the financial district is still bearish on stocks. Exceptions are made in favor of a few particular issues but even the exceptions are not as numerous as they were last week. At the same time those short of the market are given to worry over whether or not they have too much company. On this point there are no available statistics, even the fact that all stocks are either leaning flat or at a small premium throwing no light on the real situation.

With call money at 1 1/2 to 6 per cent it is not significant of the extent of the short interest in any one stock that the stock loans flat. Even a premium charge for the privilege of borrowing is simply a means that there is a small floating supply available for loaning purposes, not that there is an unduly large borrowing demand. As a matter of fact the best judges believe that estimates of the amount of short selling currently given are greatly exaggerated.

Rails, Steel Down

The two factors which have made the most unfavorable impression have been the weakness in the railway shares and the decline in U. S. Steel. There should have been no surprise about the action of the rails in view of the traffic statistics, nor about the new low price for 1931 in U. S. Steel in view of the low rate of operations in the industry. But speculative Wall Street puts great stress upon the "average" and still holds to the orthodox view that a sustained upward movement in the industrials and the utilities cannot come unless and until the rails participate. And U. S. Steel is still looked to for leadership in the stock market.

For this reason conjecture has been busy as to the action of the steel directors on the dividend at their meeting on April 28. It goes without saying that the regular rate could easily be paid if the board saw fit to order it. Whatever they do will be taken as an expression of opinion on the business outlook in circles most entitled to respect. The same is true in a lesser degree in regard to railroad dividends on which action is due in the immediate future. How far the decline in the stocks has discounted an adverse result remains to be seen.

Building Permits

Four building permits were issued Saturday by John N. Weiland, building inspector. They were granted to R. J. Monaghan, 1708 N. Drew-st., residence and two car garage, cost $5,000; W. H. Ryan, 219 S. Morrison-st., two car garage, cost $175; Mrs. Caroline Lange, 321 N. Division-st., two car garage, cost $300; and F. M. Johnson, 231 E. Lawrence-st., two car garage, cost $500.

REDUCE GASOLINE PRICES ONE CENT

Appleton gasoline distributors, like those in other cities in the state, are still "in the dark" as to the reason for a one-cent reduction in service station prices Saturday while tank-wagon prices remained unchanged. Service stations and tank-wagon prices are the same for the first time in years, according to Appleton distributors.

Low test gasoline, which heretofore retailed at 16.6 cents a gallon, inclusive of the gas tax, is now selling at 15.6 cents a gallon. High test gasoline, which formerly sold at 16.6 cents a gallon, is now selling at 15.6 cents a gallon.

BUILDING PERMITS LOWER LAST WEEK

Building permits issued last week by John N. Weiland, building inspector, dropped over $10,000 below the total of the same week last year, figures show. Last week's total was $16,550, compared to $26,860 in 1930.

Illinois Dry Law Repeal Is Vetoed By Emmerson

cating beverages. It attempts to nullify the provisions of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States so far as the state of Illinois is concerned."

Last November the voters of Illinois by a large majority expressed their approval of repeal in a referendum vote, which was adopted as the chief argument of the anti-prohibition group in the legislature this year.

During the protracted hearings delegations from wet and dry organizations were given audience and finally the measure before him, Governor Emmerson granted hearings to both sides before preparing his veto message.

Yesterday the Crusaders, anti-prohibition organization, presented a final plea for the governor's approval of the bill and advocated it as the beginning of a movement to bring "law and order back to the country."

Governor Emmerson asked in reply, whether the bill would not tend rather to "repudiate the eighteenth amendment than aid in its enforcement," and asserted that the prohibition issue had never come before him officially before and he would decide it without regard to party politics.

Governor Emmerson said that proponents of the bill claimed people of the state were not in sympathy with the eighteenth amendment, but at the same time stressed the point that executives of states were sworn to uphold the federal constitution.

"It is quite evident to me that the repeal of these acts is not a mere gesture of disapproval of prohibition... but tends to strike at the fundamental unity of national government under the federal constitution. I am not for nullification."

"It was frequently asserted that there is a mandate from the people demanding its enactment. At the election on Nov. 4, 1930, three questions of public policy were submitted to the voters: repeal of the eighteenth amendment, modification of the Volstead act, and repeal of the Illinois prohibition act. The vote on these questions was approximately one million for and something over a half a million against."

"Taken at its face value, this vote seems to indicate an overwhelming majority in favor of the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act. . . . It is not my purpose, however, to quibble over whether or not this public policy referendum was true expression of the so-called 'wets' and 'drys' sentiment of the state. In my opinion, a majority of the thinking people of this state are dissatisfied with the conditions in this country which have followed the eighteenth amendment and the enforcement acts under it. But I am equally satisfied that the American people do not want and will not attempt the correction of these evils by wiping out all regulatory liquor regulations."

"We cannot cure individual disregard for law by state disregard for the federal constitution. This is not the orderly and legal method for securing this change. It smacks more of lawlessness and rebellion. The million voters of Illinois who favored the public policy question expressed their dissatisfaction with present conditions. They did not however in my opinion, approve this method of correcting them. Illinois must stand with the federal government and the supreme law of the land."

"The argument has been made that the Republican party of Illinois in its 1930 convention platform pledged itself and its candidates for office to abide by the decision of the voters at this referendum, and that because of this pledge I as a Republican should sign this bill. This argument is based upon a distorted statement of fact."

Mercury will drop a few degrees tonight, but will rise again Tuesday morning, he says. Winds are shifting in the north and northwest, a good indication that cooler weather is on the way.

FRUIT JOBBERS HEAR ATTORNEY'S ADDRESS

Frank, Appleton, at a dinner meeting of fruit jobbers from throughout Wisconsin, upper Michigan and Chicago at Conway hotel Saturday evening. Seventy jobbers were present. COUSINS MEET AT HOTEL FOR FIRST TIME SINCE 1899

William L. Bullock, attorney at Valer, Mont., and Warren Bullock, manager of the import committee of the American Paper Industry met at the Conway hotel Monday. Cousins, the men said, had not met or contacted with each other since 1899, when they were graduated from Lawrence college.

William L. Bullock is in the city arranging for the funeral of his brother, John Bullock, Manawa drugist, who died at Hollywood, Fla., Saturday. Warren Bullock is in Appleton in the interests of the American Paper Industry. They met when the desk clerk tried to give William some of Warren's mail. Neither knew the other was in this vicinity.

Warren Bullock worked for both the Post and the Crescent years ago before they were consolidated.

PROVE ABILITIES ARE FIXED BEFORE BIRTH

Austin, Tex.—(P)—Those who believe that the abilities of men and women are fixed before their birth can find support in the latest hereditary discovery at the University of Texas.

This finding doubles at one stroke the already large number of hereditary characters that have been identified as fixed before birth. These characters are governed by genes, invisible elements of some yet unknown kind in the original cells from which grow all human beings, as well as all plants and animals.

More than 100 genes have been identified definitely, and thousands are believed to exist in each cell. But biologists have thought of them as the ultimate beginnings.

Now J. J. Aol, Russian scientist who is doing research at the University of Texas, reports to the American Association for the Advancement of Science evidence that genes are divisible. Each can be split into two or more.

"We are thus compelled to reconsider from the new viewpoint," he says, "many facts and theories of modern genetics."

SPREAD TRUTH, LIFE AND LIGHT, CHURCHES TOLD

Evangelist Deplores Lack of Concern During Spiritual Distress

The one program of the church is to bring to all mankind the truth and life and light that Christ gave, the Rev. Anton Cedarholm declared at the First Baptist church Sunday morning. The congregation was so large Sunday morning it was necessary to bring in extra chairs for the overflow.

The evangelist, who is conducting a series of Christian life services at the local church, talked of the concern manifested by people in times of physical distress, but the utter lack of it during periods of spiritual distress.

"When the great tidal wave swept 15,000 into the gulf of Mexico from Galveston island, when the great earthquake and fire shook and destroyed that great western city at the golden gate, when the Mississippi laid waste a great part of the southern Mississippi valley district, what did the people of our great nation do?" he questioned. "They sent trainloads of doctors, nurses, medicine, provisions, clothes to bring relief, to rebuild and restore."

"But at present the trouble is not a physical distress. It is spiritual distress. Men and women are under the curse of a broken law, making them rebels to the kingdom of God. How little we think and show concern in this great spiritual and moral distress. If we fail to show concern in time of spiritual need, God charges us with criminal indifference, saying 'He will require the blood of the wicked at our hands.'"

He pointed out that one who does not show concern for man's spiritual needs and does not personally try to bring a knowledge of God to his fellow men is criminally indifferent. Speaking of the value of revival, Mr. Cedarholm declared that a church ceases to be a church when the revival flame dies down. He pointed to the difference between the cheap, commercialized, professional evangelism, and the real revivals, saying that the Lutheran church was born of the greatest revival that ever spread over Europe, and that the Methodist and Presbyterian churches came out of revivals. He said that if only one of every four hearers is truly converted the revival has done well.

Hortonville Sportsmen Make Plans To Raise Fish

Hortonville sportsmen have completed construction of a dam on the Smith farm, west of the village, to form a pool to be used for raising of bass. About 15 men, all members of the Outagamie County Fish and Game association, worked on the dam under direction of Steve Ota. The dam is 18 feet long and about five feet high, of concrete construction. It will form a pool about 150 feet long and 50 feet wide, which will be fed by a natural spring. A quantity of bass fry is to be secured in June from the state conservation commission and these will be planted in fall in fishing waters about the county.

The same group of sportsmen is planning the construction of another dam, of about the same size, a short distance from this project. The pool formed by the second dam will be used for raising sunfish.

Its keel was too big for the ship yards and a steel extension had to be built into the river. The keel has been set and erection of the framework is under way. There are 1,400 men employed.

It is probable that the second big Cunard liner also will be built here, since a saving of about $1,000 could be effected.

HOUSE LEADERS ARE DOUBTFUL ABOUT SPEAKER

Republicans Have Number of Candidates for Post in Next Congress

Washington—(AP)—Returned from paying last tribute to their popular and powerful leader, Nicholas Longworth, house Republicans today looked to the difficult task of choosing his successor.

The speakership problem was a main topic of discussion among nearly 40 Republican and Democratic representatives during their trip from Cincinnati. Already candidates from various sections were appearing as prospective opponents to Democratic Leader Garner.

Republican Leader Tilson and Chairman Snell of the rules committee, stood forth as among the leading eastern candidates. Members of the funeral party said that while Tilson starts with an advantage founded on the contacts made as leader and close association with President Hoover, friends of Snell have begun an active and powerful campaign in his behalf.

From the west, the names of Michener and Mapes of Michigan, Ramseyer of Iowa, Hoch of Kansas, and Purnell of Indiana, prominently mentioned, with Michener and Ramseyer gaining strong consideration. It was considered that Wood of Indiana, would prefer to remain chairman of the appropriations committee.

Though of primary importance to Republicans, the death of Longworth greatly increased Democratic interest in the speakership. Many of those who went to Cincinnati felt for the first time their party must assume the responsibility of organizing the next house.

May Lese Majesty

Both parties conceded a close interest in the Ohio election that will name a representative from Longworth's district. The Republican house majority is now only one. Word was brought back that Gov. George White may not call the election until November.

One member who made the trip to the Republican house, a hardy one on their hands but probably will present a harmonious front at the party regulars.

When asked whether he would be a candidate, Wood, who is chairman of the national Republican congressional committee, commented jokingly:

"Anyone who nominates me may find he has taken on a bigger load than he can carry."

Wood has forecast a wide field of contenders with strong demands from the western ranks who have not had a speaker in nearly 30 years. He has stated it is not an inflexible custom to promote the floor leader.

Democrats saw their opportunities for electing Garner speaker greatly enhanced, despite the apathy of many toward taking charge of organization. Those who belong to the conservative element of the party said to do so would greatly endanger the party's opportunities in 1932.

New Hollywood Careers Attract Stars Of Stage

Hollywood, Calif. — (AP) — "New careers for old" is a cry of the screen that has lured to Hollywood and its talkies a distinguished group of famous women who for years have been bright stars on the legitimate stage.

They are not "discoveries," like so many of the younger players Hollywood has taken from the stage, but seasoned troupers who have delighted playgoers for two decades, more or less. Now they are in the films, attracted not only by the remunerative offers, but in some cases by more stable home life, most appealing after a lifetime of "living in a trunk."

The latest to join the galaxy is Francis Starr, who has been signed to play the mother role in "Five Star Final," for Warner Brothers.

Estelita, Marie Dressler, who through talkies has reached the pinnacle of fame for the third time in a comeback from bits to starring roles, such names as Cissie Loftus, May Robson, Marjorie Rambeau, Laura Hope Crews, Henrietta Crosman, Louis Dresser, Beryl Mercer and Mrs. Patrick Campbell are appearing in film news. They get in main titles with even greater frequency than they figured in drama notices and on play bills when the players were supposedly at the height of their careers.

There even is talk that Maude Adams, the cloistered violet of the theatre since her retirement, may appear in two films, the first to be Kipling's "Kim."

Miss Robson, known to the American stage for two generations, and now a benign white-haired figure, has made a successful talkie of her stage vehicle, "Mother's Millions," and is under contract to liberty productions for more.

Miss Loftus, who began singing "Molly Darling" and other ballads in Belfast in 1892, and rose to international fame as a mimic and actress, has been sent in "East Lynne" and "Young Sinners" among other screen plays under contract to Fox.

Mrs. Campbell, a star whose name stirs pleasant memories in veteran theatre fans, also has appeared in talkies on the local stage, and is otherwise active in Hollywood circles.

Miss Crews, who came to Hollywood from Gloria Swanson's instructor in elocution, recently has been added to the United Artists' roster as instructor for the young players.

Miss Rambeau, long an important figure on the American stage, has given lauded performances in "Her Man," "Min and Bill," and other talkies, and now is under contract to M-G-M.

Miss Mercer, like Miss Crews, first walked on a stage when she was four years old, playing little Willie in film news. They get in main titles with even greater frequency than they figured in drama notices and on play bills when the players were supposedly at the height of their careers.

From the west, the names of Michener and Mapes of Michigan, Ramseyer of Iowa, Hoch of Kansas, and Purnell of Indiana, prominently mentioned, with Michener and Ramseyer gaining strong consideration. OUTLOOK HARD TO DETERMINE IN BUSINESS

Slowing Up in Basic Industries Indicates Recovery Will Be Slow

By David Lawrence
Copyright 1931 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington—(CPA)—Analysis of the current business situation based upon official reports reveals the difficulty in making any detailed evaluation. There is no certainty that sustained recovery is under way. In fact the slowing up in most of the basic industries and the renewed drop in wholesale prices are taken to mean that recovery will be slow.

Most of the summaries obtainable here emphasize the steadiness of the gains in the building industry, the improving bond market, the relatively liquid position of the banks and the noticeably better conditions abroad. These favorable factors are causing the prophets to say that such gains as have been made will be held through the summer months.

All this is but another way of saying that nobody is looking for any new bottom and that the country is rather patiently trying to bring about an improvement in general conditions only to be retarded by factors requiring the healing of time.

Business in general is passing through erratic movements so often characteristic of the closing of a depression and a beginning of a revival. Such receding movements however as have occurred have been far from general.

Building Industry Gains
The building industry shows a better average on contracts awarded than at any time since June, 1930, and there is a wide geographical improvement. While the steel industry has suffered a drop in production during the last week, this is believed to be a seasonal or normal recession. The most disconcerting factor is the irregularity in price schedules and the rather negligible purchases of equipment by the railroads. The automobile trade has been buying at a reduced rate during the last three weeks but this is believed to be largely seasonal. Structural steel contracts are at high levels but purchases of line pipe are not as heavy as they have been. So the trend is distinctly confused and somewhat contradictory.

As for the automotive business, there was an increase in production last week continuing the growth of several months but the gains are below normal at this time of year. At least one important manufacturer has cut his schedules sharply after plans early in the year now believed to have been too ambitious. Generally however, the registration figures on automobile licenses do not indicate overproduction.

Highest In Months
The March automobile production, exclusive of Fords, was the highest in 10 months and represented a gain of 28 per cent over the February output.

Freight car loadings, always an indicator of business conditions, showed an increase during the third week in March and this is significant because the trend of that particular week is nearly always downward. It was the highest week of 1931 but still below the corresponding period of a year ago. Coal

DOUBTS POWER OF COURT CENSORSHIP OVER NEWSPAPERS

Question Arises in Cases Before Supreme Court of State

Madison — (AP) — A contention that courts have no power to exercise censorship over newspapers was made in the supreme court yesterday in a case involving the Milwaukee Post, a weekly publication.

The case before the supreme court was on an appeal from a decision by Circuit Judge Gustave G. Gehrz, Milwaukee, which denied the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company's application for an injunction to restrain the paper from publishing what the utility called "inflammatory communications and incitations of riot."

About two years ago the Post began a campaign against the utility to secure a single fare for street car users to and from the territory which prior to Jan. 1929, constituted North Milwaukee. The territory had been incorporated into the city of Milwaukee later.

Attorney William F. Hannan and State Senator Irving Meligan, counsel for the newspaper, contended before the supreme court that the equity power of the courts cannot be used to suppress communications like those which appeared in the Post.

"The constitution guarantees liberty of the press, freedom of speech and right of trial by jury," Attorney Hannan said. "The street railway's power for injunctive relief cannot be granted without violating these sacred guarantees."

"Liberty of the press and freedom of speech cannot be infringed by any agency of government, whether that agency be legislative executive or judicial, except, possibly, in the emergency of war or to prevent interference with or the obstruction of the administration of justice. Authorities are in agreement that the constitution forbids all previous restraints on the press, but provides for responsibility for abuse of the rights guaranteed, the question of responsibility being for the jury."

"The Weekly Milwaukee Post had a constitutional right to conduct a campaign for lower street car fares for its readers and to engage in a public controversy challenging the legality and fairness of the then existing rate of fare. Communications from its readers, editorial and news comment printed by this newspaper were nothing more than necessary parts of a lively political, economic, and civic controversy."

The fire and water committee will meet at city hall at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Matters referred to the committee at the last two council meetings will be discussed.

Marquette — (AP) — Mrs. Augusta Foglin, 65, a widow, was burned to death yesterday when her home was destroyed by fire. Firemen said she clutched a cup in one hand and the presence of a kerosene can nearby indicated the woman had been attempting to start a fire in the stove.

WHEN CHARGES ARE EXAMINED

From one angle the candidacy of Raymond Cannon, disbarred attorney, for circuit judge at Milwaukee against one of the judges who investigated his conduct, has served a useful purpose. It brought forth in very plain fashion to the people the untruth as well as the injustice that exists in so many attacks upon the judiciary.

Judge Aarons, against whom Mr. Cannon decided to run, had been circuit judge for one term of six years. There was nothing in his official life subject to any worthy criticism unless it was that his oath of office required him to listen to the evidence against Mr. Cannon and then to report that the latter had departed from the ethics of his profession.

At the outset of his campaign Mr. Cannon, who described himself as "the poor man's lawyer," and attacked, not only his opponent, but the judiciary generally as being unfair to the man of humble means, seemed to make much headway. Reports were current that people were betting four to one on his election.

Then people began to take a critical view of the situation.

They found that Judge Aarons had faithfully performed the duties the law put upon his desk. They remembered that whenever they came into his courtroom they had been treated fairly and with courtesy, although they may not always have been successful.

They also found that the "poor man's lawyer" whose gross income from his profession ran from fifty to eighty-five thousand dollars a year had paid no income tax to the state for years, while at the same time the poor men in whom he pretended so much interest were struggling to pay the taxes on their homes, taxes made higher when income taxpayers avoid their obligations.

Mr. Cannon's candidacy began to be correctly measured. People, with plenty of appearance of reason, concluded that it was a grudge candidacy, an attempt by an unsuccessful litigant to punish a judge for daring to call him to account. And then as charges of unfairness against the judiciary were scanned they too were found to be but figments of disordered imaginations.

After weighing the situation thus fairly the voters concluded that it would be a cruel injustice to turn out a judge who had only done the right as it was given him to see it. The majority against Mr. Cannon was impressive, and yet, perhaps half those who voted for Judge Aarons were surprised, upon looking into the campaign against him, to find that it was so wholly unjust and groundless.

It is oftentimes much better to have these attacks in the open than covertly made. In the open they may be better examined and, as is most often the case, discarded as worthless.

When covertly made they often travel from mouth to mouth, gaining in size and hideous aspects, and may be accepted as true by many good people when there is no truth in them.

A YOUTH GROWS UP

It usually comes within the jurisdiction of a parent to supervise the physical development of his child, yet a Los Angeles judge was recently asked, through process of law, to assist a father in giving his son treatments to curtail his growth. This boy, fourteen years old, was expanding his vertical and lateral dimensions beyond all reason, having attained a height of six feet and a weight of two hundred twenty-five pounds. The court upheld the right of the father to give his son pituitary gland treatments to prevent him from becoming a "circus freak."

The son objected to this treatment, claiming that it affected his brain and interfered with his school work, although physicians testified the treatment would have no ill effects.

The parent probably approached his subject with due consideration as to the effects of the treatment. Perhaps he was more mindful of the effect it might have upon himself in case the patient objected to its administration. Six feet and two hundred twenty-five pounds are essentials worth considering when it comes to an argument.

It's a wise parent who knows his own limitations. So he wisely acquired the help of a court of law, and, it is safe to assume, a few huskies from the police force to assist in carrying out the decision of the judge.

But why did this lad object to the treatment? Did the threat of "circus freak" find a warm response instead of provoking a shudder? Where is the boy of 14 who doesn't prefer to travel with that wonderful thing, the circus, and irrespective of the job he draws?

MICHIGAN AND CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Michigan plainly does not want capital punishment. It was the first to abolish the death penalty, doing so in 1847. Many times since attempts have been made to restore it, but the proposals never received public approval.

Two years ago the legislature passed an act providing for the death penalty for first degree murder, but it was vetoed. This year the legislature again voted favorably upon the question, passing a measure which had the approval of Governor Brucker. It provided, however, that before becoming a law it should have the approval of the voters by referendum. This vote has just been cast and a substantial majority was against it.

The states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Kansas, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Rhode Island and Maine do not now have a capital punishment law. Six states have abolished the death penalty only to restore it later. These are Iowa, Colorado, Oregon, Arizona, Missouri and Tennessee.

A study of the populations of the states which do not have capital punishment as compared to those that do, does not indicate any particular characteristics which might induce them to have an exceptional disapproval of the death penalty. With the exception of Kansas they are all northern states representative of both agricultural and industrial populations.

Michigan's crime record, especially in Detroit, is about as bad as any place in the country, yet the citizens of Detroit voted against the proposed law. Even the cities of St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, faced at the moment with the memory of the brutal murder of a St. Joseph policeman by the notorious Fred Burke, voted overwhelmingly against it, though it seemed to be the general opinion that it was unfortunate such a law could not be applied in Burke's case.

So long as criminals can be caught and the jury system does not weaken in convicting nor the courts in punishing, the absence of the death penalty, judged from Wisconsin's experience, will not be missed. Certainty of punishment still remains the greatest single deterrent of crime.

In refusing to be stampeded to extremes by the crime wave in Detroit, which has been unusually vicious, and such other cases as that of the arch-killer Burke, the people of Michigan, it would seem, have shown a commendable coolness and conservatism.

ADVENTURES OF A SCOT

A youth of 18, James Oliver, has returned to his home at Stirling, after a remarkable series of adventures in Canada and the United States. Oliver decided to try his luck in Canada two years ago. He had just turned 16 when he sailed at the end of September, 1928, under the government farm employment scheme. He was on four different farms in Quebec and Ontario, and did not find the conditions at all to his liking. He stuck to the first job for 15 months, although he had to work from 5:30 in the morning until 7:30 in the evening, and he was on other farms for five months and two months. In 18 months he saved $71.

"The last farm I was sent to was at Campbellford, Ontario," he explained, "but the reception I got and the look of the place were enough for me and I decided to go right back to Montreal, where I had some money in the bank. 'I could not pay my train fare, but I managed to get back to the city by concealing myself first on one train and then on another. The immigration authorities in Montreal told me that they were finished with me, so I decided to try my luck in the States. 'I fell in with a chap from Glasgow and two English fellows, and we crossed the border at Rouses Point. We had only got a short way across the line, however, when an excise officer hailed us. 'We told him we were bound for Chicago, but his other questions soon stumped us, and I then confessed that we came from the Old Country. 'I guess you had better take a ride with us,' the officer said. He bundled us into his car, telling us that he would get a room for us in a hotel. That night he dumped us into jail instead. Oliver, who arrived back at the week-end, is of a roaming disposition, and he confesses that despite the hardships he had undergone he rather enjoyed seeing a bit of the world. 'I would not mind returning to Canada,' he declared, 'but I will take a job in the city next time. No more of the country life for me!'—Glasgow (Scotland), The Evening Times.

IT GIVES us one of those big pains to read about the man in Monroe who was kidnapped and is being held for ransom . . . we haven't any idea what may happen by the time the column goes to press, but as it's written, that pain is verily, verily bothersome . . . the authorities have been told to stay away because something might happen to the victim . . . the family prefers to pay the price rather than let the police try to solve the problem . . . swell state of affairs . . . there's one advantage of being broke—the kidnapers won't be interested in you . . . "In the land of the free, and the home of the brave" . . . tum, tum . . . ho hum . . .

Meanwhile, more than fifty United States senators and representatives will go abroad, free of charge, on the U. S. transport, paying but a dollar and a half a day for meals.

The state has decided not to tax cigarettes. Which is nice of the state. They gave us the gas tax this year, maybe we can have the cigarette tax in 1932. Bigger and better taxes, boys, let's bring back prosperity.

One last wheeze about Thompson of Chicago and his relations with the Tribune. You know that the Trib had been blaspheming Big Bill like nobody was ever blasphemed before. Well, up in the Trib's morgue, where obituaries are kept, was a sketch of Big Bill's life, written last year when it looked as though Bill was too sick to live.

Oddly enough, it said no end of nice things about Bill. Somehow, right at the peak of the campaign, Big Bill got hold of the obituary from the Tribune files, and had it printed in a pamphlet.

The Trib—who, incidentally, sold Liberty a short time back to McFadden—was considerably embarrassed.

Folks up in Minneapolis were pretty much shocked during one of the last days of Lent to hear the courthouse chimed, during a religious program, suddenly ring out with:

"How Dry I Am."

Immediately, hundreds began to call the chime-ringer to task. Religious people were deeply offended.

Then it was discovered that the chime-ringer was entirely right, that the melody which we recognize as the old barroom song is really "O Happy Day," a respectable old hymn.

THE VANISHED OLD WAYS

When mother shakes her head and sighs
At something which they do or say,
I whisper: "Come, let us be wise,
Remember they are young today!"

"When we were young, 'tis very true,
Such dreadful stuff we didn't do;
Such dreadful things we didn't know,
But that was, oh, so long ago!"

"Get down the pictures from the shelf
When you were prim, dignified and fat
After I wore ear muffs. Ask yourself
If now you'd have them look like that."

"Oh, we were very proper then
And wore what children ought to wear;
But would you like to braid again
So very tightly Janet's hair?"

"Let us not fret about their speech,
Nor sigh, for customs changed and gone;
But let us do our best to teach
The truths of Nineteen-Thirty-One."

Personal Health Talks

THE TUBERCLE OF YOUTH

Even old timers have a vague notion that consumption is a disease of youth. In the morbid eighties it was almost fashionable for young women to look languid and frail as though "going into decline" if not actually going into a faint or at least a faint at every pretext.

Some of the old masters painted beautiful pictures of disease. The typical likeness of consumption, that is, well advanced tuberculosis of the lung, white skin, wide bright eyes, hectic flush and emaciation, made the sickly young woman of the eighties appear interesting and haunting. This pathological conception of beauty had almost passed with the passing of bustles and wasp waists, but there has been a serious effort to revive it in the last few years, through such little tricks as the so called Hollywood or teen day diet—tricks that have sent a good many vapid young women into the tuberculosis sanitarium, notably many aspirants for movie stardom.

As we understand tuberculosis, the primary infection occurs in infancy or early childhood, as a rule through the intestine and the deep abdominal lymph nodes of the lymphatic system of the digestive tract; or through the tonsils and the lymph nodes in the neck which, when enlarged, are commonly known as "kernels." How much of this childhood infection is from milk from tuberculosis cows is a question the experts are still debating. There is a prevailing belief that most of the bone, gland and skin tuberculosis of childhood is of bovine origin. If this is true it constitutes the strongest argument in favor of strict laws and ordinances prohibiting the sale or distribution of milk from cows that have not been tuberculin tested.

Childhood is the period of repeated infections with tuberculosis which cause little disturbance of health at the time, as a rule. We know this from the evidence obtained from tuberculin tests and also from the evidence obtained in autopsies. A considerable majority of young adults harbor latent foci of tuberculosis in deep lymph nodes ("glands"), that is, living tubercles, which only rarely produce active disease.

The time of life when this common nidus or focus of tubercle bacilli seems most likely to produce active disease is youth. Why youth? Here again we can only speculate. At any rate the first symptoms of active tuberculosis usually occur at an age when life is full of interest and excitement, when the tubercle bacilli easily leads to intemperance and excesses, and in this epoch youth is always prone to make light of what seem to be trifling disturbances of health, or to conceal the symptoms with the aid of rouge, pick-me-ups, stimulants, narcotics, braces, tonics, blood builders, developers and other artifices or pretenses.

It is not very remarkable to find a cavity in one lung at the very first examination of such a youth. It is now an every day experience to discover several cases of active lung tuberculosis among the children in a school room, when they are all subjected to X-ray examination and other diagnostic tests.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Purine Bodies

What are the causes of foods which contain purine bodies? I have lived an irregular life but I want to try to do better in future and go in for boxing. (C. W.)

Answer.—Purins are nitrogen compounds in foods, whence uric acid is derived. In old times the doctors imagined uric acid was a cause of diseases, notably gout, whatever that may be, and tried to exclude from the diet foods such as liver, yeast, beef, cheeses, eggs, which are rich in purin. I don't believe there is any good evidence that uric acid ever causes any disease.

Scar
Several weeks ago I accidentally burned my face with sulphuric acid. It is all healed now, except a number of dark blotches. Will you kindly tell me how to remove these? I have tried a number of bleaching creams to no avail. (L. V. M.)

Answer.—I advise you either to leave the scars or marks severely alone or else consult a physician.

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—A former First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Sr., is displaying an energy and industry little short of remarkable.

Since the death of her husband in 1919, Mrs. Roosevelt has won a reputation of being among the most restless of travelers. She apparently thinks nothing of setting out to circle the globe—in fact, in the last 10 years her travels have carried her several times around the world.

At present she is in Jamaica, the third trip south she has made since last autumn. Twice recently she has gone to Porto Rico to visit Theodore, Jr., who is Governor of the island.

And she goes by land, water and air. She is enthusiastic about aviation and often has utilized the airplane in her travels. Most of the time she travels alone, but occasionally some member of her large family accompanies her.

Visits Odd Corners
She and her son Kermit made a trip around the world a few years ago. Starting from New York, they went to San Francisco and embarked for Japan. They traveled the trans-Siberian railways to Moscow and visited Berlin, Paris and London on their way home.

Their luggage on this trip consisted of two suitcases and a vacuum bottle.

Since then she has been to Italy to visit a sister, to Switzerland, and to South America alone, to view the secluded Iguazu waterfalls on the boundary line between Brazil and Argentina.

She has been to Yucatan and other points in Central America to see remains of old civilizations. She has been to the Canal Zone and has made several trips to Trinidad and the West Indies.

And periodically she makes a pilgrimage to France to visit the grave of her son, Quentin, who lies where he fell in the world war at Chamey.

Not does she rely on her travels alone to peek her buzz. Since she took the world tour with Kermit, two books which she wrote have been published.

One of them, in which she collaborated with members of her family, is concerned with her travels. "Cleared for Strange Ports," is the title, and it was published in 1927.

Later she wrote "American Back Logs," the story of Gertrude Tyler and her family from 1860 to 1930. This book is the story of an episode in the history of the family of Mrs. Roosevelt's mother, whose maiden name was Gertrude Tyler.

She closes her home at Oyster Bay regularly around January 5, the anniversary of President Roosevelt's death, and from then on usually spends several months in travelling.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Robert Montgomery, Broadway boy who made good—in Hollywood—has just been back to revisit his old haunts.

Since he left two years ago he has had the enviable job of making love in the films to Greta Garbo, Constance Bennett, Joan Crawford and Norma Shearer. He has appeared in 14 pictures. And now he is about to be starred.

Montgomery just now is swimming up the crest of popularity's wave. Broadway is glad to see him. The hangers-on will tell him what a great guy he is, especially when the waiter appears with the check.

Up From Broadway
Montgomery was around Broadway for a long time. But about the only employment offered him was in stock and road companies. He is rather glad of it now. Thinks it gave him valuable experience for the talking pictures.

His last Broadway play was "Possession," in which he had a secondary role. The star was the late Margaret Lawrence.

One day Miss Lawrence notified the management that she was too ill to carry on. Her understudy was sent on to replace her. Then the manager looked around for another actress of stellar reputation.

Mary Boland was closing that week in another play. She was asked to take over Miss Lawrence's part, beginning the next Monday. That was on Friday, and her answer came at the end of the second act of the evening performance of "Possession." She turned down the offer, regretting the time was too short for her to learn the many "sides," or "script pages," of the Lawrence role.

Hearing of her answer, Montgomery, still in make-up, ran out of the theater and over to the playhouse where Miss Boland was washing up. For most of an hour he importuned her to reconsider and take the part. Finally she accepted.

Fan's Man
His work in "Possession" got him a contract to play opposite Vivian Banks in "So This Is Heaven." Then it was discovered that he was too tall for the role. But nevertheless Montgomery went to Hollywood.

He was born 27 years ago in Beacon, N. Y., son of a rubber manufacturer. The death of his father when he was about 15 revealed that the family fortune had vanished and young Bob had to go to work.

His first job was as mechanic's helper on a railroad. Then he sailed as deck hand on an oil tanker. On his return to New York he roomed with a would-be playwright, who got him his first bits on the stage, at $35 a week.

Girl fans lately have been sending him an enormous quantity of mail. He is six feet tall, weighs 160 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. His wife is Elizabeth Allen, who played the leading role in the stage play "Broadway."

In all regards Montgomery seems the typical, normal American young man. He plays golf and tennis, sings tenor, plays the piano, has a small cottage in Hollywood and drives a tiny low-priced car.

A Pittsburgh woman motorist who ran down the same man twice in one day, is engaged to marry him. Bound to get her man one way or another.

BILL PROPOSES MORE POWER FOR RAILROAD BOARD

Senator Miller, Kaukauna, Would Raise Deer Tag Cost to $3

Madison—(P)—A bill designed to give the state railroad commission increased power, was introduced in the senate here this week by Sen. Thomas M. Duncan, Milwaukee. A similar measure was introduced in the assembly.

Senator Duncan outlines the bill as follows:

All payment by Wisconsin utilities to holding companies for services must be approved by the commission. Before approval, all holding companies receiving such money must submit book accounts relating to such payments.

All directors of operating utilities in Wisconsin must be residents of the state, and the commission receives authority to remove a director or officer of a utility whose managerial powers have been delegated.

Foreign holding companies must "qualify" in Wisconsin by filing a waiver with the secretary of state before being permitted to do business or hold property in Wisconsin.

All costs of the commission, except those connected with the security division and regulation of railroads, must be borne by the operating utilities in the state, the amount to be paid being allocated on the basis of gross revenue.

The commission receives the power to pass on all contracts between municipally owned distributing utilities and private generating utilities.

Payments of common stock dividends by operating companies must not be paid without the approval of the commission. Utilities must receive commission sanction before installing expensive equipment.

The commission's name will be "the Wisconsin Public Service Commission." Instead of the railroad commission.

"This bill," Senator Duncan says, "is a drastic measure intended to give the commission power to represent aggressively the public interest and to protect the people of Wisconsin against the increasing centralization of their public services from Chicago to New York."

By Sen. J. H. Carroll, Glendale—appropriating $250,000 annual from the general fund to the conservation commission to be used for the upkeep of state parks, the propagation of fish and game, enforcing the game and fish laws, and for the acquisition by purchase or lease of lands to be set aside for public hunting and fishing.

By Walker Polakowski, Milwaukee—Abolishing the Wisconsin Real Estate Brokers' board and substituting a new board of five members with one-year terms. Appointments by the governor. The bill also would require all dealers and salesmen of real estate to take out licenses.

By Irving Mehligan, Milwaukee—To broaden the powers of boards of public works to facilitate construction and repair of docks on waterfronts.

By Gettelman, Milwaukee—To give the city school boards the power to provide transportation to and from school for pupils.

By Philip Nelson, Maple—Authorizing the railroad commission to suspend transportation companies to permit service in the cities if other forms of transportation are substituted or if it shows that facilities are not desirable.

By Mehligan—Providing for associated judges for municipal and county courts in Milwaukee.

By Gettelman—Giving the state conservation commission the sole power to regulate and supervise the cutting of timber on state owned lands.

By Nelson—Exempting from taxation.

Who's Who On The Appleton Post-Crescent

(This is the thirty-first of a series of articles about members of the staff of the Appleton Post-Crescent. The articles will seek to acquaint readers of this newspaper with those persons as individuals and also will discuss the nature of their work. Members of the staff are presented in the order of their length of service. The thirty-second article will appear tomorrow.)

Lester Hartzell, linotype operator for the Post-Crescent, learned his work in mechanics and printing in training school in Indianapolis, Ind. His earliest education was received in Edgerton grade and high schools.

His first newspaper job was in Decatur, Ind., from where he went to Manitowoc, Kenosha, Janesville and then back to his home town, Edgerton. He came to the Post-Crescent as a linotype operator in 1924, which was his first job in Appleton.

Les has never worked at anything else but a linotype since he came to the Post-Crescent. He enjoys linotype work more than any other part of a printer's job. His work is exacting and requires the skill of an experienced printer. The linotype machine with which Les sets up all the headlines in the Post-Crescent is so large and carries so many kinds of type that 24 styles of headlines can be set on it. The exacting part of the work is in transferring from one head letter to another. Les must be careful to change the many mechanical parts in the machine that makes it possible to set a certain kind and size of headline. In setting a headline, the spacing is the important part of the work which relies on the printer's balance and taste. Each headline is composed of a certain number of lines, units, and every different headline has a number to designate its form.

The printer who sets the heads must consider the limited amount of space allotted to each headline, the variation of the words in length, and with these considerations make a pleasing appearance that will attract readers to the story. Les also has charge of the feature material on the editorial page, such as the columns, Post Mortem and Twenty-five Years Ago, which are set in double column widths. In addition to his linotype work, Les is a machinist in the composing room, assisting Eddie Starnard in keeping the machines in condition.

Les enjoys fishing and playing bridge in his leisure time and he does both as often as he can. During the World War he served as an apprentice seaman in the naval reserve and is a member of the American Legion. He and Mrs. Hartzell live at 1603 W. College-ave with their small daughter, Dolores Ann, who is two and a half years of age.

SHIPPING ON GREAT LAKES TO SEE SLUMP

Spring Arrives Early but Trade Is Expected to Show Decline

Cleveland, Ohio —(P)—Spring arrived early in Great Lakes, clearing the northern passages of ice and inviting activity among the shippers, but activity this year will be unusually small, shippers predicted today.

They visualized a situation in which most of the 500 ore boats with their crews of approximately 17,500 men, lying idle in their docks as the season opens April 15. Some of the larger fleets have not yet had their yearly inspection by the government.

It is expected, according to Herman M. Griggs, general manager of the Ore and Coal Exchange, that the shipping season for ore and coal will be the dullist since 1921. He said he did not expect much activity before June 1, and not more than 60 per cent normal shipping by July 1.

About this time of the year, steel manufacturers get together and make their estimates of the amount of ore they will consume during the year. They base their estimates on the outlook for their own business. At the present time the steel industry is operating at about 50.5 per cent of capacity, according to A. J. Hain, associate editor of the magazine Steel. Cheerful spots in the automotive and structural steel industry give indication that the outlook might increase, Hain said.

On the anticipations of the steel industry, it is estimated that about 41,000,000 tons of ore will be shipped down the lakes this year. The tonnage last year was 47,000,000 and the year before 66,000,000.

On the docks at April 1 there were 3,765,283 tons of ore as compared with 5,093,264 last year. In storage at the furnaces as of March 1, there were 34,257,887 tons. On March 1 last year the tonnage was 29,475,285.

Hain pointed out that a large amount of ore is usually carried over from year to year at the docks, but this year there is a carry-over of from 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons in excess of the normal amount. This alone, is enough for pig iron consumption, based on the consumption in January and February, to last four or five months.

Shipments of coal, which is a secondary cargo, moving back to the northwest as it does in empty ore boats from the lower lake ports, is expected by Griggs to be about 30,000,000 tons this year, or a decline from normal of about 2,000,000 tons. He said it appears as if the movement will be small until the first of August, for there is now very little preparation to start shipments, and the season contracts for lake coal have not been let.

Although there is very little definite information here on prospects for grain shipments, it is expected that they will be small until late in the season.

Many players, when they have taken the last card of their long suit in defending a No Trump, have an idea that they should perform start their next best suit. If such suit should happen to contain a sequence that could not be hurt by the lead of the top card thereof, such a lead would be proper. However, if a safe sequence is not held, it is often better to throw the Declarer in the lead with a suit which he is known to hold.

In this manner, Declarer will have to start the remaining suit or suits himself, probably to his disadvantage. In the above deal, if West, after taking his last Diamond, should shift to the two of Hearts, Declarer would readily go game, for he will then have an opportunity to finesse the Hearts on the second round. If instead, West will shift to the Clubs which Declarer has already started, game will be saved.

Sallient Points of the Bidding

Contract: South opens the bidding with one No Trump. West passes, North bids two No Trump, East passes and South bids three No Trumps, concluding the bidding.

Auction: South obtains the declaration for his original bid of one No Trump.

The Play

West opens the four of Diamonds and South takes East's Queen with his King. South then leads the ten of Clubs from own hand, plays the four from Dummy and the trick is taken with the King in East's hand. East returns partner's Diamond and West takes three tricks in that suit. East and West have now four tricks in and it requires but one more to save game.

Instead of leading the Heart to a possible tenace in South's hand, East leads the Club. North having discarded the Ace on West's last Diamond lead, South continues the Clubs. East has but one discard to make and he can safely discard the two of Hearts. There being four Spades in Dummy, North must protect that suit at least once and accordingly he discards the two of Spades and the three of Hearts. Since he must start both the Spades and the Hearts himself, Declarer must lose one trick in one or the other, thus making but two odd.

Two Harding Letters Are Exhibited In New York

New York—(P)—Two autograph letters ascribed to President Harding, written at the time he was a member of the senate and mentioning a woman "under the eye of government agents" as a German informer, were placed on exhibition in New York today. They are a part of a collection of historical documents assembled by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, noted collector.

The letters are addressed to "My dear Jim" and are signed merely "W. G. H." They are concerned almost entirely with expressions of anxiety over a woman called "Carrie." There is no evidence to identify the woman, and since the envelopes are missing the identity of "Jim" also is a mystery. Dr. Rosenbach declined to disclose the name of the person who sold the letters to him and said he had no information other than that which appeared on the surface.

Written on the stationery of the United States senate, the letters emphasize the necessity for Carrie's remaining away from Washington when "feeling grow" intense and prejudices are more pronounced at the casualty list grows.

"She forgets," one letter states, "we are in war—hellish war—and she forgets how Germany treats those who are against the government."

The other letter remarks that "most of the stuff said about Carrie is pure invention."

By Gettelman—Providing for a $25 to $100 fine for the adulteration of vinegar.

By Miller—All livestock dealers are to be licensed and must pay a $5 license fee.

is all rot" and that "I know she is no German informer—couldn't be."

"Yet," the letter goes on, "these things have been reported. I have never doubted her ability to square herself with a reasoning government agent, but I haven't wished her to undergo the annoyance of such a visit. The great peril is some unheeding, impassioned, self-appointed sponsors of justice and patriotism, who might humiliate or harm. It is a pity that there can be such danger, but war is hell and sanity does not always prevail."

Later the same letter adds: "Now, about Washington. I must not, cannot say it to Carrie, and I had rather she did not know I am saying it to you, because she could misconstrue it, but she and Isabelle ought not come to Washington now. Nor ought they go to New York. I had some inquiry made about things said, and the Washington trip last year led to suspicion about acting as informer (ridiculous, of course) and the suspicion was confirmed by the long stay at Port Jefferson."

Only one surname is mentioned in the letters—that of an unidentified "Judge Mosser," who was to be asked to help in a "hostess appointment" for Carrie.

The letters are considered valuable to a collector not because of their contents but because President Harding wrote few letters in long-hand.

Don't Prod Children To High Marks

"What's the matter, Mary?" "The teachers say I cheated in test today and she gave me a failure. She gave me three failures."

"Did you cheat?" "She says I did."

"Did you? I'm asking you. Did you cheat?" "I only looked across at Helen's paper."

"And then what did you do?" "She says I changed my answer." "Did you? Yes or no. Stop this hedging business and tell the truth. Did you look at her paper and then change your answer?" "Yes."

"That's all. Then you are a cheat. You've disgraced yourself for good. And the whole family beside. What will people think of you? You won't be able to hold up your head in this neighborhood ever again. I don't see what possessed you. WHY did you do it?" "I don't know."

Well, I can guess. Somebody at home kept prodding the child to get high marks. Somebody at home kept asking, "What did you get in arithmetic today? What did Helen Sprigge get? Did you get higher than Mary Jane Cole? Good for you. Keep it up. Don't let any of them get ahead of you. If you are top of the class at the end of the term I'll give you a new wrist watch better than any the other girls have."

Then the teacher anxious to please somebody in authority who took marks as the one and only standard of teaching success pressed for high marks. "These children did well. They may stand when I call their names. All those who got a hundred stand in front. Now those who got ninety and up, stand to the right. Anybody who got below that may sit where he is. All those who failed (why should anything below ninety be considered a failure?) take extra homework for tonight."

That sort of thing either at home or in school, will bring on an epidemic of cheating. Over-emphasis upon marks shows disproportion in the thinking of teacher or parent. Marks ought to be significant but they lose significance if they are overbalanced and become the end and aim of school life. A mark ought to be a symbol of measurement that has grown out of work done in the spirit of search and achievement. When it becomes a symbol of competition, the verdict of success or failure, it has no sane significance.

When a child cheats for a mark you may know: He was in fear of failure; he was striving to maintain a place not his own; he had a false idea of his work and that idea had come through some outside influence that urged him beyond his power. Cheating is an indication that all is not well in the classroom or in the home. It is to be met by a careful scrutiny of the possible causes. Most of the children are honest and the few who are likely to yield to temptation can be held by the power of the group. Make the conditions favorable to honorable conduct and the children will not fall below the standard.

CHARGE APPLETON MAN DROVE CAR RECKLESSLY

Theodore Lange, 714 N. State-st., was arrested Sunday evening on Highway 76, near the county asylum, on a charge of reckless driving. He was to appear in municipal court Monday to answer charges. The arrest was made by Charles Steldi, county motorcycle officer, who charged he followed Lange at about 70 miles an hour for some distance before he finally overtook him. The chase started, the officer said, when Lange cut a corner and narrowly avoided striking the motorcycle officer. Lange also cut through an arterial without stopping, disregarded a railroad wigwag signal, and crossed the tracks ahead of a train, the officer alleged.

Seventy-five years ago tomatoes were called "love apples," and were cultivated for ornament, not for food.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

It was Harry Becker who had parked his car in front of the police station. Parked regardless of police orders and traffic regulations, Corrine noted inwardly.

He came rushing into the station, his eyes steady in their sternness, his rough light hair rumpled.

"Where's my wife?" Corrine heard him ask, and something that was very breathless and very lovely seemed to come stealing back in to her heart again.

But not so easily could he gain his point. He might be protecting her because she was his wife, not because he loved her. But relief lingered, anyway. She wondered if she could be relentless . . . She would try . . .

The officer at the desk mumbled something and the next instant Harry came into the room.

"Corrine, you . . . you . . ."

"Yes?" Her heart-shaped face was uplifted, rose-flushed and eager. Her dark eyes were no longer misty with pain but shining, star-bright and glamorous. And her red lips curved into a ghost of a smile.

"On, Corrine!"

Then suddenly she was in Harry's arms, and whether the rain blew up the street or down the street didn't matter. Whether the rest of the world doubted her or believed her wasn't so important.

There was still love in the world, and there was faith and dreaming. Sue slipped away quietly. Harry would take care of Corrine now. But it had taken a grim play of fate to bring him to her. Out in the corridor Sue met Donald Payne, the red-headed newspaper reporter.

"You and Corrine seem to share the breaks. You're both page one stuff," he told her. "But we've caught Sybil Lester in her last trick. She trumped her own ace and lost the game."

"How?" What do you mean?" Sue asked.

"The taxicab did it. Sit down and I'll tell a story. You see she must have reasoned it would be a nice piece of spite work to get hold of that taxicab. She grabbed the first loafer at the station that night and had him drive the bus in. Then she put it in a deserted garage on her father's own grounds. Nobody ever goes into it. She was just keeping it in case . . ."

"How do you know?" Sue interrupted, brushing the dark curls away from her clear blue eyes.

"Just a minute, my dear young lady," Donald Payne answered in a half-mocking, half-laughing voice. "Mystery stories always give their solutions last, you know. When Sybil saw that her accomplice had been frightened into giving the whole thing away . . . when she saw how many of her tricks she had unraveled . . . she was desperate. So she got out the trusty old taxi."

"She picked up Redding and suggested that he ramble along with her. A nice arrangement, you know. Taxicab without a meter. And he went. She wanted to get him out of the way. She had to, to save herself. And here was her scheme. If she could shoot him . . . kill him, if you don't mind . . . she could plead self-defense. She could say that inasmuch as it happened in your taxicab, and Redding had swung over to your side, that she was the victim of a plot."

"And how did you find all this out?" Sue asked when the reporter paused. "And can you prove it?"

Fashion this model of brown and white printed crepe silk and you'll love it.

It has splendid points so kind to the mature figure. Note how the applied front that extends to the waistline narrows its breadth. And how the dip in the hip seaming at the front gives the figure a lengthened line. The skirt plaits also help to carry out a certain line.

The sleeve flounce and waist trim are a delicate pink shade crepe. White lace tucked in at the neckline is dainty and feminine.

Style No. 3076 that may be copied exactly at a substantial saving is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52 inches bust.

BRUSHING YOUR EYELASHES IS STIMULATING

BY ALICIA HART

If you are one of Dame Nature's favorite children and she has endowed you with those long, curling, frisky eye lashes that make the rest of us weep with envy, this is not for you.

But if you are one of the hundred million or so of Mother Nature's step-daughters who have just ordinary lashes, and those uncurling, then we can talk make-up.

Don't be disheartened. You can do wonders for those lashes of yours. And I don't mean to beat them. Like a movie queen stepped off the lot by mistake, either. Bending lashes is a fine art to be indulged in by those who are past-masters and then only in the evening.

But you can groom your eyelashes, you can encourage them, you can darken them and by this trick or that make them simulate those gifts of the gods which poets always call "Sweeping, curling lashes."

You will need an eyelash brush, a little trifle. Be careful of the brush you choose. Instead of the lashes. By all means brush the lashes. Usually the best way is up from the eye, with the eye open wide and staring. Brush the face powder out of them, brush oil into them nights and brush make-up into them when you want it.

There are two kinds of eyelash make-up that are generally used. You can use the cake kind with water, which usually does a neater trick and stays on longer.

Get your eyelash coloring to tone in with your hair, eyebrow and eyelash scheme. It never hurts to have your eyelashes a bit darker than your eyebrows, however. But don't go in for too heavy a fringe unless you are sure it enhances your eyes. For some it enshrouds them. For some it makes them look lost to sight behind an overdone make-up.

There are certain tricks you can use of beautify the eyes while doing the lashes. A tiny line run out from the outside corner of each eye about a quarter of an inch to

Your Question And Its Answer

By J. A. Panneck, D. C.

Palmer Chiropractor

QUESTION: I am troubled with colds. They commence early in the fall and continue all winter. Will chiropractic benefit my condition? Please answer in your column.—E. J. S.

ANSWER: Colds are the result of lowered bodily resistance and especially a weakened state of the membranes involved, usually nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Having colds indicates poor bodily elimination. Chiropractic adjustments strengthen the resistance because they increase function or bring about normal function to tissues which are subject to lowered resistance and at the same time promote elimination from the body. Right here I might say that the basis of the spine interfering with normal function to the organs of the body. Chiropractic adjustments restore normal function to the organs by releasing this pressure at the spine. Therefore, I suggest you consult a competent Chiropractor at once.

QUESTION: I have been bothered with stomach trouble. My doctor tells me I have ulcers and another tells me I have liver trouble, still another diagnosed it as nervous indigestion. What is your opinion?—Mrs. J. R. T.

ANSWER: Chiropractic does not depend for its success upon a diagnosis of the case. Our fundamental does not concern itself with whether the patient is suffering from gastritis, peptic ulcer or nervous dyspepsia. We know that something is wrong with the stomach and know that there are certain nerves supplying the wall of the stomach and that they emit from a certain point in the spine. We know that these nerves must be free to carry the life-giving mental impulse to the stomach and that the only point along the entire course where this carrying capacity can be interfered with is where these nerves emit from the spinal column. We know further that disease cannot exist unless the carrying capacity of the nerves is impaired. How do we know this? It is based upon the firm foundation of anatomical facts coupled with the unquestionable certainty of clinical results. What does the chiropractor do? He adjusts the subluxations (a condition where the segments of the spine are not in proper alignment) and because of this adjustment the pressure is taken off the nerves supplying the stomach.

Now the nerves can carry mental impulses in normal quantity and quality to the stomach and under these conditions disease cannot exist.

WE WOMEN

By Virginia Vane

Dear Virginia Vane: Have been going with a boy for three years who has strong ideas against marriage. He is comfortable in his home and shows no disposition to leave it. I am not happy in my home and I want to get married. When I came straight out and asked him whether he intended to marry he said he would certainly be the worst kind of cad if he accepted so much of my time and then didn't offer to marry me. But since that discussion he has never mentioned the matter again, and I can see that he is just going along comfortably letting things remain as they are. What shall I do about it?

UNHAPPY.

Either your love is stronger than your pride, and you will be content to go on waiting because you are afraid that any ultimatum on your part would bring dissolution, or else your pride must triumph—also your common-sense—and you will insist that some definite move be made.

You see things might well go on just as they are. The boy has no reason to change his views about matrimony as long as he is sure of your love, comfortably certain that you will wait for him—and not half an inch long makes your eyes look farther apart and bigger. Why? It is a matter of optical illusion and any kind of magic of that sort should be accepted but never questioned.

(Copyright, 1931, NEA Service Inc.)

at all anxious to change his present mode of living. He's bound to take the situation more and more for granted as you both grow older.

It isn't fair to you of course because you have no guarantee against him deserting you after you have given so much of your youth and love to him that you are no longer attractive to anyone else. If you are to go on trusting him, you must have some sense of security for the future.

It isn't easy for a girl to force the man she loves into a decision, but after three years of courtship you're justified in expecting a proposal. And you might gently but firmly hint that you will have to find some other interest in life, if your swain is going to be a permanent caller and nothing more.

Choose your own way of doing it, but let him know that for your own sake, you can't keep seeing him exclusively year in and year out. You are still young, and there is a chance that there may be someone else in the world for you who would not be so dilatory about this marriage business. Let the present candidate know that he's got to take on a certain amount of responsibility if he expects to keep the love of a young, attractive girl.

BETSY: You're running after the wrong man. You've thought so long about Joe, and how much you adore him and how much you missed him while he was away that you're not capable of a good, clear, critical judgment, now that he's back.

Because you've been concentrating on this rather fickle and lazy individual, you haven't bothered to look around to see what's going on about you. It hasn't occurred to you that other men could hold a candle to the absent hero. You've accepted their attention lately, not bothering to ask yourself whether after all they may not be worth two of your romantic love.

Consequently you've been treating a good man very badly and you've been overwhelmingly the unworthy suitor with flattering attention. You've helped to spoil him, and you've utterly ignored a swain of whom any girl could be proud.

Don't let sentiment run away with you. You have no basis for your love for Joe. You've just made a moving picture hero out of him, and this frantic infatuation of yours can never lead to anything permanent in the way of happiness.

Whereas if you'd cast a more intelligent eye at the other leading actor, you'd notice that he's made of the right material. Even if you didn't fall in love with him, you could at least enjoy his friendship instead of wasting tears and sighs over the faithless Joe.

CHANGED WIND HALTS FOREST FIRES ADVANCE

Chief Remaining Threat in Wisconsin Is in Vicinity of Crandon

air swooped down upon Crandon unit back firing operations and an expanse of cultivated soil on the west side of the city temporarily blocked the flames.

Residents of Laona prepared last night to desert the city. Women and children began packing household furnishings while the men fought desperately to control the flames. Hasty back-firing achieved a respite when the fire was within half a mile of the city, the smoke and ashes obscuring city street lights.

Flames flared again near Laona today born on a northwest wind that threatened to drive the flames along a six-mile front into the city. Forestry officials were at the scene and could not be reached for comment but the manager of the telephone company characterized the situation as dangerous.

Flames in Florence and that reported in Florence and that few structures had been destroyed at Tippler, an old lumbering center. Separate fires also raged in the vicinity of Wabeno, east of Crandon, and a particularly dangerous blaze was reported near Plicker lake where at least five resorts were endangered, numerous small fires were noted in Price-co and the Phillips fire department remained watchful, refusing requests to assist adjoining towns imperiled by the flames. A number of small fires were also reported in Ashland-co.

Michigan Losses Heavy

Upper Michigan, in addition to the fire that originated near Menominee, suffered from a number of fires in Delta and Dickinson-coes, communities in the lower peninsula. A quiete, Sault Ste. Marie and St. Ignace were destroyed by trees which fell as they burned. Nine fires destroyed considerable property in Marquette alone.

Stricken areas were rendered particularly helpless because of the lack of water in creeks and rivers. The snowfall of the past winter was unusually light and spring rainfall has been negligible. Warnings of the exceptionally hazardous situation were recently broadcast by E. W. Tinker, regional forester for the lake states region, whose aides furnished materials and assistance in the needy sections.

First reports of the fires trickled into densely populated sectors yesterday forenoon, but the situation was not considered acute until a blustering northwest wind fanned the flames into second growth timberlands bedded with slashings. The changeable course of the wind left the fire fighters helpless except for backfiring operations in the immediate vicinity of the towns.

Fire Warden Albert Kirkpatrick originally gathered a force of 50 men to combat the fires in the vicinity of Crandon. The men sent an urgent request for additional help to Police Chief A. R. Tracy. Every available man in Crandon was mobilized. They were loaded on trucks and carried to the scene of the fire which was then burning several miles away.

Outgoing groups of men were met by groups of fire fighters who were beating a hasty retreat as the flames, burning more than a hundred feet in the air, moved onward toward Crandon. A call for assistance to neighboring towns elicited the response that they were fighting fires of their own.

Word was sent back to those remaining in Crandon that the city was doomed unless a final attempt to back-fire on the city's edge was successful. In the full glare of the oncoming inferno, men worked feverishly to combat flame with flame. An expanse of cultivated land afforded additional security and the city was saved.

All Forest-co highways, with the exception of Highway 32 to the south were blocked by flames or the debris of fallen trees and telephone lines. Telephone communication in rural areas was virtually at a standstill.

Four extensive fires burned for hours in the vicinity of Park Falls. Price-co. Telephone communication with this village of Kennedy was severed shortly after it was reported the flames had driven four families from farm homes and were threatening the town. About 100 men battled flames near Cayuga. Another fire, about two miles north of Washburn, destroyed at least one farm barn. Two separate blazes were reported east and west of Mellen.

In the eastern district fire zone, bordering on the Wisconsin-Michigan line, a heavy blanket of smoke and lurid colored skies attested to the wide expanse of the blaze. Mellen, the largest city in the area, was unable to send fire fighting equipment to the village of Wallace because of grass fires in the city.

Sheriff Edward Reindt emptied the cells of the Menominee-co jail, sending 18 prisoners to the fire zone to assist. Failing to halt the destruction of Wallace, the prisoners were moved on to Ingalls.

Flaming embers borne by the wind scattered the fire over a wide area in Oconto and Marinette-coes. Crivitz and Peshigo, in addition to Oconto and Lena, were saved from probable destruction after the fire had ignited scattered buildings on the outskirts. Three hundred and fifty men fought doggedly for five hours to keep the flames from sweeping over Peshigo. The fire was stopped less than 200 feet from a block of houses.

Near Amberg in Marinette-co seven farm buildings, three of them unoccupied, were burned.

The Tri-County high school, in the town of Somo, at the corner of Vilas, Oneida and Lincoln-coes, was destroyed by a grass fire Sunday, together with the Somo town hall. The school was a two-story brick structure.

Two miles north of Merrill, the Fred Krast farm home was leveled. Fires continued to smoulder in the vicinity of Phillips, Price-co, to

WIFE RULES OVER SNOWDEN'S HEALTH

English Leader Has no Master in Politics, but Needs His Mate to Keep Fit

BY FRANK HAVILAND KING

London—(AP)—Philip Snowden, the crippled little man behind the British budget, is ill, but the woman behind the man behind the budget is in charge of the situation.

She is Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of the chancellor of the exchequer, and in her own right a power and personality in British public affairs.

It is humanly possible for Philip Snowden to hobble into the House of Commons with his two canes on "Budget day," April 14, and then sit in the gallery above the cabinet bench during the presentation of Snowden's 1931 budget, calling for a national revenue of more than $4,000,000.

Down at Eden Lodge, a little country retreat among the Surrey hills, Mrs. Snowden has been attending her frail husband's wants as she has done throughout the struggle of his rise to fame and power in the British government.

She has been a constant help, helps eliminate his vast correspondence, wards off unnecessary callers and receives treasury officials who confer on the final form of the national balance sheet.

Snowden knows no master but his wife. Men call him cold, bitter and indomitable. His wife finds him "sweetness itself, and patience personified."

"I fell in love with Philip," she has confessed, "when I saw his smile."

At the Hague conference two years ago the French nicknamed Snowden "Monsieur No-No" because of the persistency with which he turned down French reparations demands, but to his wife he is a "Yes-man" on all questions of health. In politics they are as one.

Cultured and artistic, Mrs. Snowden is one of the governors of the British government-controlled national radio organization.

FIRE SWEEPS OVER 7-MILE RIVER AREA

Timberland, Fences, Telephone Company Poles Are Damaged

(Special to Post-Crescent)

New London—Fire, which undoubtedly started from a cigarette stub of a discarded match in the bottom of the Wolf river Sunday morning, spread over a seven mile area. Fanned by a fierce gale the fire caused considerable damage to fences, timberland and telephone poles. There was no loss of buildings, although a few were threatened during the day. Hay stacked in low meadows was lost. Damage to poles of the Wisconsin Telephone company will reach several hundred dollars. Company employees patrolled the Northport road all Sunday night.

The fire was discovered shortly before noon. In less than ten minutes it had spread over a two mile distance, fanned by the gale. Moving swiftly toward the Northport road, fishermen who had their cars parked in the meadowland adjoining the roadway removed their cars. Several times the flames jumped the roadway, and smoke enveloped drivers so that for a time the road was impassable. The fire twisted about and before night had reached the Northport bridge. In its southern flank it swept much of the cut-off district. In the evening it was endangering farm buildings in the Mukwa community. Men were dispatched to watch fire in the woods near the Jost cottage.

ROASTING CONTROL IS FLAVOR SECRET OF RARE COFFEE

Scientific Control Gives Hills Bros. Coffee the Flavor of Flavors

Invariably foods cooked in small quantities taste the best. The cook is able to control every step—perfectly—mixing, flavoring and cooking.

The principle of Hills Bros.' patented, continuous roasting process is based on the same idea. Instead of roasting their exclusive blend of coffee in bulk, measured quantities of about three pounds pass continuously through the roasters. The heat and speed of operation are accurately controlled with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform.

No other coffee can have the same uniform flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee because no other coffee is roasted the same way. This process—Controlled Roasting—was originated and patented by Hills Bros.

The vacuum can in which Hills Bros. Coffee is packed keeps it fresh always. By the vacuum packing process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken out of the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, will not keep coffee fresh. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

CHANGED WIND HALTS FOREST FIRES ADVANCE

air swooped down upon Crandon until back firing operations and an expanse of cultivated soil on the west side of the city temporarily blocked the flames.

Residents of Laona prepared last night to desert the city. Women and children began packing household furnishings while the men fought desperately to control the flames. Hasty back-firing achieved a respite when the fire was within half a mile of the city, the smoke and ashes obscuring city street lights.

Flames flared anew near Laona today born on a northwest wind that threatened to drive the flames along a six-mile front into the city. Forestry officials were at the scene and could not be reached for comment but the manager of the telephone company characterized the situation as dangerous.

He said several new fires were reported in Florence-co and that a few structures had been destroyed at Tipper, an old lumbering center. Separate fires also raged in the vicinity of Wabeno, east of Crandon, and a particularly dangerous blaze where at least five resorts were endangered. Numerous small fires were noted in Price-co and the Phillips fire department remained watchful, refusing requests to assist adjoining towns imperiled by the flames. A number of small fires were also reported in Ashland-co.

Michigan Losses Heavy

Upper Michigan, in addition to the fire that originated near Menominee, suffered from a number of fires in the Dickinsons woods, causing communication lines between Marquette, Sault Ste. Marie and St. Ignace were destroyed by trees which fell as they burned. Nine fires destroyed considerable property in Marquette alone.

Stricken areas were rendered particularly helpless because of the lack of water in creeks and rivers. The snowfall of the past winter was unusually light and spring rains have been scanty. In addition, the situation was exceptionally hazardous because of the exceptionally hazardous situation were recently broadcast by E. W. Tinker, regional forester for the lake states region, whose aides furnished materials and assistance in the needy sections.

First reports of the fires trickled into densely populated sectors yesterday forenoon, but the situation was not considered acute until a blustering southwest wind fanned the flames into second growth timberlands bedded with slashings. The changeable course of the wind left the fire fighters helpless except for backfiring operations in the immediate vicinity of the towns.

Fire Warden Albert Kirkpatrick originally gathered a force of 50 men to combat the fires in the vicinity of Crandon. Later he sent an urgent request for additional help to Police Chief R. Tracy. Every available man in Crandon was mobilized. They were loaded on trucks and carried to the scene of the fire which was then burning several miles away.

Outgoing groups of men were met by groups of fire fighters who were beating a hasty retreat as the flames, towering more than a hundred feet in the air, moved toward them. Telephone communication with neighboring towns elicited the response that they were fighting fires of their own.

Four extensive fires burned for hours in the vicinity of Park Falls, Price-co. Telephone communication with the village of Kennedy was severed shortly after it was reported the flames had driven four families from farm homes and were threatening the town. About 100 men battled flames near Cayuga. Another fire, about two miles north of Washburn, destroyed at least one farm barn. Two separate blazes were reported east and west of Bellevue, La Crosse-co. The fire zone, bordering on the Wisconsin-Michigan line, a heavy blanket of smoke and lurid colored skies attested to the wide expanse of the blaze. Menominee, the largest city in the area, was unable to send fire fighting equipment to the village of Wallace because of grass fires in the city.

Sheriff Edward Reindl emptied the cells of the Menominee-co jail, sending 18 prisoners to the fire zone to assist in fighting the flames. The destruction of Wallace, the prisoners were moved on to Ingalls.

Flaming embers borne by the wind scattered the fire over a wide area in Oconto and Marinette-cores. Crivitz and Peshtigo, in addition to Oconto and Lena, were saved from probable destruction after the fire had ignited scattered buildings on the outskirts. Three hundred and fifty men fought desperately for five hours to keep the flames from sweeping over Peshtigo. The fire was stopped less than 200 feet from a block of houses.

Near Amberg in Marinette-co seven farm buildings, three of them unoccupied, were burned.

The Tri-County high school, in the town of Somo, at the corner of Vilas, Oneida and Lincoln-cores, was destroyed by a grass fire Sunday, together with the Somo town hall. The school was a two-story brick structure.

Two miles north of Merrill, the Fred Krast farm home was leveled. Fires continued to smoulder in the vicinity of Phillips, Price-co, to-

WIFE RULES OVER SNOWDEN'S HEALTH

English Leader Has no Master in Politics, but Needs His Mate to Keep Fit

BY FRANK HAYLAND KING

London—(AP)—Philip Snowden, the crippled little man behind the British budget, is ill, but the woman behind the man behind the budget is in charge of the situation.

She is Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of the chancellor of the exchequer, and in her own right a power and personality in British public affairs.

If it is humanly possible for Philip Snowden to hobble into the House of Commons with his two cases on "Budget day," April 14, Ethel Snowden will help him to Westminster and then sit in the gallery above the cabinet bench during the presentation of Snowden's 1931 budget, calling for national revenue of more than $4,000,000,000.

Down at Eden Lodge, a little country retreat among the Surrey hills, Mrs. Snowden has been attending her frail husband's wants since she has come throughout the struggle of his rise and fall and power in the British government.

She arranges his frugal diet, helps eliminate his vast correspondence, wards off unnecessary callers and receives treasury officials who confer on the final form of the national balance sheet.

Snowden knows no master but his wife. Men call him cold, bitter and indomitable. His wife finds him "sweetness itself, and patience personified."

"I fell in love with Philip," she has confessed, "when I saw his smile."

At the Hague conference two years ago the French nicknamed Snowden "Monsieur No-No" because of the persistence with which he turned down French reparations demands, but to his wife he is a "Yes-man" on all questions of health. In politics they are as one.

Cultured and artistic, Mrs. Snowden is one of the governors of the British government-controlled national radio organization.

FIRE SWEEPS OVER 7-MILE RIVER AREA

Timberland, Fences, Telephone Company Poles Are Damaged

(Special to Post-Crescent)
New London—Fire, which undoubtedly started from a cigarette stub of a discarded match in the bottom of the Wolf river Sunday morning, spread over a seven mile area. Hay stacked in low land meadows was lost. Damage to poles of the Wisconsin Telephone company will reach several hundred dollars. Company employees patrolled the Northport road all Sunday night.
The fire was discovered shortly before noon. In less than ten minutes it had spread over a two mile distance, fanned by the gale. Moving swiftly toward the Northport road, fishermen who had their cars parked in the meadowland adjoining the roadway removed their cars. Several times the flames jumped the roadway, and smoke enveloped drivers so that for a time the road was impassable. The fire twisted about and before night had reached the Northport bridge. Hoover's Uncle, Former Indian Agent, Succumbs

Pawhuska, Okla. (AP)—President Hoover's uncle Laban, Major L. J. Miles, is dead.

Major Miles, 87, former Indian agent who opened his home to the fatherless Herbert Hoover here 43 years ago, succumbed yesterday.

Both the president and vice president Charles Curtis were "his-boys." Mr. Hoover, following the death of his father in West Branch, Iowa, spent a year in the big stone residence from which the Osage Indians were ruled. Mr. Curtis, on the rolls of the Kaw tribe as a youth, was under the guardianship of Major Miles.

Major Miles, a Quaker whose title was one of courtesy, was the brother-in-law of the president's mother, Huldah Minthorn Hoover. His wife, Agnes Minthorn Miles, who preceded him in death four years ago, was her sister.

They sought to relieve the burden on the widow in persuading her to permit the 14-year-old future president to live with them. The journey was made by train to Coffeyville, Kas. From there the party traveled by mule-drawn buckboard and horseback.

Hoover was welcomed into the Quaker family. He enjoyed its sports. He rode and explored the countryside, where, as a freshman on vacation from Stanford university, he later discovered and named the Pawhuska limestone deposits.

When he became national food administrator in the World War his Aunt Agnes called a family conference at the ranch home near Pawhuska.

"Our nephew and Cousin," she said, "now is one of the great men of the country and of the world. I do not believe it proper to do anything or say anything that would imply familiarity. So I ask that all never to refer to him again as Bert. He is to be Mr. Hoover or Herbert Hoover."

Major Miles rode with Mr. Hoover on a special train from West Branch to Kansas City in the campaign of 1928. President Hoover invited the major to attend his inauguration, but ill health prevented.

In office and out, Major Miles worked for the Osages and won their esteem. He saw oil make them wealthy. He came to the Osage reservation in 1917 by appointment of President Hayes, but was removed in the Cleveland administration. In 1939 he was appointed superintendent of the Osage agency and held office again until 1933, when he and forty other agents were replaced by military appointees.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow morning and burial will be at Arkansas City, Kas. Surviving are two sons, Theodore and Oakley, and two daughters, Mrs. Blanche Hopper of Pawhuska, and Harriet Odell, of Topeka, Kas.

GIVES ADVICE TO POULTRY RAISERS

State Expert Points Out That Outlook for Industry Is Good

Four recommendations are made by John E. Hayes, expert with the poultry section of the state department of agriculture, to Wisconsin poultry raisers. These recommendations, if followed at once, should help poultry raisers to increase their production and insure greater profits, according to Mr. Hayes' letter to Gus Sell, county agent. The four recommendations are: cull the laying flock closely; feed a complete ration, including mash; buy only the number of chicks your equipment permits; and hang on tight because better days are in sight.

The outlook for the poultry industry is good, Mr. Hayes says. An extremely mild winter has resulted in an exceptionally heavy production of eggs. But the number of hens on farms is below last year and receipts of market poultry are now high. The eggs a hen produces now cannot be produced again next spring and summer.

All these facts seem to indicate a smaller production of eggs next spring and summer, with resultant high prices. Farmers are justified in purchasing chicks this spring but they are advised by Mr. Hayes not to overbuy. Purchase only what your equipment will handle, is Mr. Hayes' advice. If a farmer has an 8 by 12 house he shouldn't buy over 250 chicks. If he has a 10 by 12 house he shouldn't get more than 350. Feed prices now are low enough to make chick feeding profitable.

Major League Baseball Teams Open 1931 Season Tomorrow

A'S, SENATORS, YANKS LEADERS IN JUNIOR RACE

Accomplishments of Macks Hinge Entirely on Hurling Staff

BY PAUL MICHELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
HICAGO — (AP) — Having watched their National league cousins reap great harvests for four straight years while they eagerly snatched world series glory, American league clubs set out on their 1931 baseball wars tomorrow with renewed but rather doubtful hopes of a tighter pennant race.

Most of the experts, accustomed to seeing the league stage a somewhat top-heavy pennant race for the past few years, predict just another romp for Connie Mack and his Philadelphia Athletics with only a little interesting crowding by Washington, New York and perhaps Cleveland. The clubowners, however, join with their managers in predicting the closest race in years from start to finish and in first as well as second division.

Mack's Hold Key
A careful sifting of claims and hopes just before the big get-away indicates that the key to the situation is held by the Athletics, who have been running away with the flag for two straight years. Connie Mack, perhaps with a feeling of remorse, has failed to strengthen his championship front for the 1931 campaign except for a few reserves while the rest of the clubs have strengthened their forces in varying degrees.

The big "if" of the race centers around the Athletic pitching staff.

OPENING GAME PITCHERS
American League
Washington — Washington, Brown, vs. Philadelphia, Earnshaw.
Cleveland — Cleveland, Ferrell, vs. Chicago, Thomas.
St. Louis — St. Louis, Stewart, vs. Detroit, Whitehill.
New York — New York, Ruffing, vs. Boston, MacFayden.
National League
Chicago — Chicago, Root, vs. Pittsburgh, French.
Cincinnati — Cincinnati, Lucas, vs. St. Louis, Rehm.
Boston — Boston, Siebold, vs. Brooklyn, Clark.
Philadelphia — Philadelphia, Elliott, vs. New York, Mitchell.

If "Lefty" Grove and Big George Alexander are as good as they were last year, the A's probably will repeat no matter what the reserves accomplish. If either of Mack's two pitching axes experience a poor season, and no reserve pitcher comes through in big style, the whole race may be turned upside down. Walberg and Mahaffey, two pitchers who helped Grove and Earnshaw last season, haven't looked so well this spring although Earnshaw, said, husky 20-year old pitcher, just chased from Portland of the Pacific coast league, has caused many a smile to ripple across Connie's face. If McDonald comes through and Grove and Earnshaw are in form, the A's with their terrific batting punch probably will repeat easily.

Walter Johnson and his Washington Senators and the New York Yankees, piloted by the same Joe McCarthy who lifted the Cubs out of baseball's wilderness in the National league, are the two clubs which are expected to end the domination of the Athletics if any team does it. Of the two, the Senators look the strongest because of excellent pitching, a timely attack, a tight infield and the spirit that moulds championship teams. The Yankees still possessing a great punch at the plate, are contenders although their pitching is of a suspicious quality. Given good pitching, the Yanks probably would extend the A's to the limit, but they don't appear to have them.

Indian Fielding Bad
Fielding is the big Cleveland problem. Error on defense beat the Indians last year.

Detroit, Chicago, Boston and St. Louis all have been strengthened during the winter and spring shopping season but none is expected to startle the league by winning the pennant. Of the four, the White Sox appear to be the most improved although they, like Cleveland, must prove their ability on defense. Detroit has a good attack and a fair defense but pitching worries Manager Buck Harris. The Browns have pitching and fielding but light hitters, a trouble likewise afflicting the Boston Red Sox who have made great improvements over last year.

Two new managers will be in the league for the thirty-second season, John "Stano" Collins of the Red Sox and McCarthy of the Yankees. Too, for the first time since its existence, the league will open a campaign without a president because of Ernest S. Barnard's sudden death last month.

COTTER AND KNAUER MIX AT MILWAUKEE
Headlining an all-state amateur boxing show, Frankie Knauer will engage Harold Cotter of Kaukauna on April 24 at the Eagles club, Milwaukee. Six bout, featuring Eagles scrappers against selected boys from other Wisconsin cities are scheduled.

In the semi-windup, Max Maker, bantam, will meet George Haberski of Waukegan. Hagarski and Oscar O'Banion, who is slated to fight Bruce Ferro at 112 pounds, are Central A. A. C. junior champions.

Julius Cohen Johnny Roman and Billy Miller will also be wearing the Eagles' colors. Opponents for these three lads are being selected by Curtis Brown, matchmaker.

Old Faces Missing as Big Show Opens

NEW YORK — Faces of the heroes of other years vanish from the picture, as year by year new players come to the big leagues.

The baseball season will open tomorrow, for the first time without Grover Cleveland Alexander in a major league uniform, and for the first time without George Sisler. One of the greatest pitchers who ever lived, and one of the finest first basemen have given way to the big leagues' constant call for youth.

Breaking In
Several promising young players are getting their first taste of competition in the big show this season. One of them, Johnny Vergez, brought from the Pacific Coast League to fill the gap at third base for the New York Giants following the transfer of Fred Lindstrom to the outfield, is hailed as a find by John McGraw.

Joe Vosmik, who led the Blue Ridge and Three-Eye leagues in batting during the last two years, is breaking in with the Cleveland Indians, as an understudy to Charley Jamison, the aging left fielder of the Tribe.

Another Burns
There is usually someone named Burns playing for one of the big league teams. A few years ago George Burns, playing first for the Indians, set a season's record for two-bash hits. This year, Jack Burns, a left-handed first baseman for the Browns, Manager Bill Killefer personally scouted young Jack at Wichita Falls in the Texas League toward the close of last season, and has placed his stamp of approval on the player.

Mickel Heath, from the Coast League, is expected to add strength

Three More Amateur Bouts For Thursday Announced

THREE more fights have been announced by Matchmaker H. W. Miller for Thursday night's show at Armory G. The windup bout was announced a few days ago—Windy Thomas of New London vs. Augie Stubler of Sheboygan.

The cards which have just been complete will find Grizzly Herman of Sheboygan and Leo Champeau of Green Bay, two boys with a hefty scale in either hands, Frank Weyenberg and Hank Schultz, two local heavyweights; and Nils Knox and Louis Waters, two Kaukauna boys will be fighting for the honor of their respective sides of the river at Electric City.

Herman hasn't been heard from much around Appleton but if Matchmaker Miller is pitting him against

ANDERSON AS IRISH COACH IS SURPRISE

Appointment Indicates Possible De-emphasizing of Football

BY LAWRENCE PERRY
Copyright 1931
New York — (CPA) — The selection of Heartley Anderson to have charge of the football coaching at Notre Dame surprises Notre Dame alumni as well as the public generally.

While Anderson is a thoroughly able coach, his scant experience as a head coach—was two years with St. Louis university—as well as the fact that he had been a lineman when in college, made it seem likely that some graduate of the Rockne system who had won fame elsewhere would be called back to take the helm.

There are things about this important appointment—one of them being the fact that Anderson will be known as "senior" coach, not head coach—which indicate a strengthening of a tendency toward reducing emphasis on athletics which was marked before Rockne's death in the rapid change in conditions under which a student might enter Notre Dame and remain there. These new rules, such for instance as the one preventing freshmen from holding any job at all in his first year, requiring that he come to college with the complete price of tuition in his pocket, are bound to affect the flow of varsity material.

Anderson and the junior coach, Jack Chevigny, will undoubtedly build an effective team and their work will blend of the educational aims and ideals of the educational authorities of Notre Dame than could have been possible under the rule of a man who stood so dominant, so unique in influence, so outstanding in ability as Knute Rockne. It looks as though there never will be another Rockne at Notre Dame.

CARDINALS ARE FAVORED TO COP N. L. PENNANT

Cubs, Robins, Giants and Pirates Also Considered Flag Contenders

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK — (AP) — Another new race in the National league will start tomorrow with at least four or five clubs in the running—that is the dope the day before the 1931 season opens. Optimism is the rule in the elder major league and few clubs are willing to admit they won't be close to the top in September.

The St. Louis Cardinals are generally favored to repeat their triumph but only after the hardest kind of struggle from the Chicago Cubs, Brooklyn Robins, New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates. The consensus of experts has picked the five leaders to finish in that order with Boston, Philadelphia and Cincinnati bringing up in the rear.

While all the clubs have added new playing talent in preparation for another tight race, the Cardinals, for the most part, are standing pat. Dan Howley, a holdout and Ernie Lombardi, a left-handed first baseman, are the only new acquisitions. The veteran St. Louis mound staff has been augmented by two promising recruits, Dizzy Dean and Paul Derringer.

Hornby In Condition
With Rogers Hornby, now manager, back in condition, the Chicago Cubs are brimming over with confidence. Hornby has made no changes in last year's regular lineup but has acquired a lot of good reserves, both recruits and experienced players.

Brooklyn's Robins plugged a few holes by trading some of their spare man power to the Phillies for Fresno Thompson, a steady second baseman, and Frank O'Doul, hard hitting outfielder, and also are highly optimistic.

The New York Giants are counting on young Johnny Vergez to take over at third base while Fred Lindstrom plays right field. Like most of his rival managers, John McGraw could use another good pitcher or two but Harold Schumacher and John Berly may fill the bill.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, handicapped by injuries last season, again are rated as a fifth National league contender. With Pie Traynor and Lloyd Wadsworth in shape, the Pirates should be much stronger. Tommy Thoenow, ex-Phillie, at shortstop, may help.

Boston Has New Men
Boston's chances seem to depend upon how their newly acquired minor league sluggers fare. Manager Bill McKechnie has four newcomers in his regular lineup, Wesley Schrimmer and Red Worthington, outfielders; Earl Sheely at first base and Charley Wilson at third. The Phillies are counting on improved pitching to put them into the race. They traded several good men for pitchers and will start with Buzz Arlett and Hal Lee in the outfield, Dick Bartell at short and Leslie Malton at second. Their new moundmen include Clyde Dudley and Jim Evers from Brooklyn and Stewart Bolen from Baltimore.

Dan Howley's Cincinnati Reds still are in the process of rebuilding and have few hopes of climbing high in the standing. Edd Roush, former Giant holdout, and Nick Culpom may provide some badly needed punch at the plate.

Wriston Denounces Athletic Control By Writers, Public

Denouncing the control and election of athletic directors and coaches in high schools and colleges by sports writers and the public who want winning teams regardless of the cost, Dr. H. M. Wriston, president of Lawrence college, told delegates of the eleventh annual convention of the Wisconsin Association of School Boards and the City Superintendents Association of Wisconsin Friday at the Hotel Lorraine, Madison, that the subject of athletics and physical education "was loaded with dynamite."

In pointing out the dangers of "publicity of sports," Dr. Wriston declared that "if the public were as full of interest in great public policies as it is in the winning of a prominent football game, we would have nothing to do but as to the permanency of our desires."

The influence of the sports writer in selecting athletic directors was exemplified by personal experience of Dr. Wriston.

"One might almost say that sports writers make news. I have had a coach nominated and selected by a sports writer and his following and announced before I had considered the man. Of course, I accepted the selection, since that was the only thing left for me to do," he said jestingly.

"The athletic performance is by its very nature a public performance,"

Chaff 'n ChatteR

By Gordon R. McIntyre

Eastern sport fans and others are starting a cry against the ban on baseball coaches on the bench while league games are being played. Listen to Dutch Carter, Yankee pitcher of years ago, in a copyrighted story that came to the writer's desk the other day:

"Give the game back to the boys. That is the stock yelp of the narrow backs who frame such phrases: such is the cant of ill-handled persons who never got up a sweat on an athletic field. Well, all right; the boys want the coaches back on the bench. Give the coach back to the boys. They want it. And since the game is to go back to them, give them everything else, too."

"All this legislation taking coaches away from the players in important games, after they have been permitted to con the players through contests against non-league teams, is the sort of Alice-in-Wonderland stuff you get from faculty reformers."

BROADCASTING OF GAMES BY PLAYERS NEW TO BASEBALL

N. B. C. Plan of Having Vets Do Job Being Tried by Tris Speaker

BY FRANCIS J. POWERS
Copyright 1931

CHICAGO—(CPA) An innovation in the broadcasting of baseball games will be undertaken this spring, by the National Broadcasting company, which has just signed Tris Speaker to handle the Cub and White Sox games over its Chicago station. Speaker, one of baseball's greatest heroes, is the first player to be brought to the air as a permanent broadcaster.

Speaker dropped out of the playing end of the game last year, after twenty-four seasons on the diamond, but the sport still has him in its grip and from his extensive knowledge of the pastime he should be able to describe graphically the action on the playing field.

The broadcasting of games seems to be growing in favor with major league club owners, who only a year ago frowned on the practice. But such men as William Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs and Billy Evans of the Cleveland Indians, believe that the radio stimulates rather than lessens interest in the game and are enthusiastic in its favor. In some of the larger minor leagues broadcasting also is favored.

Much of the managers, dislike for broadcasting of games was attached to the manner in which the work was done. They believed there was too much criticism of players by the "microphone experts. It was to obviate any such fault and insure its pattern, an expert description of the Chicago game that caused the advent of Speaker into the talking end of baseball.

"I have punched the air often and been given the air by umpires many times," said Speaker in discussing his new job, "but this will be the first time I ever played a game on the air."

If Speaker is successful in his new venture it may mean a new endeavor for retired ball players who are sufficiently good speakers to broadcast games. The experiment of the Chicago station will be watched with considerable interest both by baseball men and radio officials.

Merchants Workout AT WILSON DIAMOND

Despite the fact the heavy wind made playing almost impossible and kept the Wilson school diamond floating through the air most of the time, the Appleton Merchants, local entry in the Central Wisconsin league held their first spring drill Sunday afternoon. Manager Bedford sent the boys through a short infield practice and then through a long batting practice.

The Merchants received a surprise when Eddie Helms, catcher last year, reported for the workout and announced he was ready to start the season. Earl reports were that Helms would play with another club here.

A game with the Pure Milk company team has been carded by the Merchants for next Sunday at Wilson school grounds.

FORDS HOLD WORKOUT DESPITE WIND, DUST

Although there was little chance for a lengthy workout, Appleton baseball enthusiasts who will seek positions on the Fords, local entry in the Fox River Valley league baseball club, went through their first drills at Brandt park Sunday afternoon.

The high wind blowing yesterday raised huge clouds of dust on the diamond and kept the boys from doing any infield practicing. About 20 players took a few swings with the bat and romped around the outfield. Manager Len Smith supervised the drill.

The 2nd place Lucky Strike team lost 2 games to the Cubs who now trail the runners-up by two games. A. Munding rolled 150, 211, 175, 526 for the Strikes but her efforts brought victory only in the last game. G. Koerner with 174, 212, 117, 503 had 1 high series for the Cubs.

Badgers took two games from the Pals, the latter team failing to make the grade when two 300 series and two 300 series were reported.

Merchants Workout AT WILSON DIAMOND

Despite the fact the heavy wind made playing almost impossible and kept the Wilson school diamond floating through the air most of the time, the Appleton Merchants, local entry in the Central Wisconsin league held their first spring drill Sunday afternoon. Manager Bedford sent the boys through a short infield practice and then through a long batting practice.

The Merchants received a surprise when Eddie Helms, catcher last year, reported for the workout and announced he was ready to start the season. Earl reports were that Helms would play with another club here.

A game with the Pure Milk company team has been carded by the Merchants for next Sunday at Wilson school grounds.

FORDS HOLD WORKOUT DESPITE WIND, DUST

Although there was little chance for a lengthy workout, Appleton baseball enthusiasts who will seek positions on the Fords, local entry in the Fox River Valley league baseball club, went through their first drills at Brandt park Sunday afternoon.

The high wind blowing yesterday raised huge clouds of dust on the diamond and kept the boys from doing any infield practicing. About 20 players took a few swings with the bat and romped around the outfield. Manager Len Smith supervised the drill.

CULTIVATING "UNCLE"

As I have said, Mr. William was unattractive and, frankly, Mrs. Williams was not a very pretty woman. In appearance she was small and wizened; assertive, quarrelsome and shrewish. Rarely did appearances more belie the truth. She was a dear, clever, delightful person. She had a great gift of silence, and an equally great gift of what one might term, inconspicuousness.

Very few people who were, for a time, with Mrs. Williams H. Williams, could afterwards give any sort of identifiable description of her.

The third of the trio who kept hope alive in my heart was that astonishing product of his times and environment, to whom I have already referred, and whom I will now describe, the crooks "Uncle" -- albeit his help was given to me, in this case, unwittingly and unintentionally.

How shall one describe Uncle? For he was at once a shameless liar whose word was his bond, a cunning rogue of guileless mind, an inveterate thief with whom one could trust one's property as with a Bank, a murderer of the sweetest nature, a pleasant and gentle performer of cruel deeds.

In the good--or bad--old days, Uncle, a very prominent underworld politician had been one of the best-known saloon-keepers in Chicago; and was, in these times, an even more important, political and proprietor of one of the best-known speakeasies of the same city.

The police rested assured that Uncle would give them no false information, and bear no false witness whereby some innocent stranger should suffer for a crime committed by one of Uncle's friends.

Crooks, on the other hand, knew that there was not enough money in all the world to bribe him to betray a trust.

And although this strange creature was admittedly and professedly the friend, helper, and confidant of crooks and criminals, he was not regularly engaged in the pursuit of any form of crime--save indeed that of vendor of illicit alcohol.

Nor was Uncle in any sense of the word a receiver of stolen property, albeit he did, at times, "lend" for his friends large sums of money, and articles of the highest value, such as jewelry, which he must have known or very strongly suspected to have been stolen by those who entrusted them to his care.

For this service he made a fixed but reasonable charge, and once a crook had deposited money or jewelry with Uncle, he knew it to be as safe as if it were in a bank.

Uncle was not only useful directly to the police, but was also for political reasons, under the protection of some powerful "High-up," for Uncle swung a big vote.

Williams H. Williams, like the Chief of Police, was of opinion that if anybody in America knew anything at all about the gang who had got away with the St. Clair diamond, it would, sooner or later, be my friend "Uncle."

For not only was he a clearing-house for all the information of crookdom, but was also the personal friend of all the biggest crooks.

Naturally it would be idiotic to walk into Uncle's speak-easy and simply say to him:

"Who was it kidnapped St. Clair's kid, and touched him for the big sparkler?"

Uncle would merely regard the speaker with cold suspicion, and ask him what he was talking about. No, our plan, as sketched out by Williams H. Williams, was that he and his wife should impinge most gradually upon the consciousness of Uncle, in the role of obviously very wealthy and successful crooks; that they should very gradually cultivate him, and that after weeks and months--and, if necessary, a year--they should attain to intimacy, and win his approval and confidence.

Not, of course, in any hope that they would be able to induce him to betray any secrets, or intentionally to tell us anything detrimental to the interests of those who had trusted him.

But there was, according to Williams, a chance that he might be hoodwinked into indiscretion, for like many other great men, Uncle had a weakness. He was no drunkard and indeed he rarely drank. But when he did, he drank a good deal; and, although he never became intoxicated, he would, on these occasions, become mellow, reminiscent, and communicative.

Even so, a single indiscreet question or remark would suffice to shut him up like an oyster.

On the other hand, a friend and confidant who talks the converse--all, gently leading the conversation in the required direction might learn a lot in the course of gossip--provided he betrayed no interest in what he heard, and contrived to convey the impression that all this was no news to him, and that he and Uncle were equally well informed upon the subject.

Naturally, Uncle was not our only hope, nor he and the clientele of his speak-easy our only sources of information on the subject of the past and current history of the leading crooks whose more particular line of business was blackmail, and kidnapping for ransom.

Not only did we frequent every likely speak-easy, but for a time, William and I actually opened and ran one of our own, in the hope that we might make it the rendezvous of the type of people with whom we wished to hold enlightening converse.

This venture came to an abrupt end, however, for one day the representative of a big beer-baron, rival to him who supplied us with our liquor, burst into our saloon and sought sorrow.

"Say," bawled our visitor, "which of you guys runs this joint?"

"I do," admitted William, suppressing a hiccup. "Pleased to meet you."

"Well, look at here. You won't be pleased next time, if you go on selling any more North Side stuff, see? Tomorrow you'll get your daily dollop of our dope--and you'll cash up to me every Sunday morning. Get me?"

"I'm fixed to pay dollars on Saturday's....," replied William....

"But I could pay in lead, Sundays, if you must come," he added.

The man's right hand moved like lightning, there was a flash of blue steel from his hip-pocket, and a shattering bang.

But the bang came from William, and the West Side beer-baron's representative staggered back with a broken arm as an automatic pistol fell from his hand.

"Don't stoop for it brother," advised William, "and go while the going's good."

Nursing his arm, the man staggered to the floor, and as he shouldered it open, turned and faced us.

"Make yer wills, both of ye," he growled, and was gone.

"I've been expecting just that," observed William. "Joint-keeping's a mug's game. Your own brewery shoots you up, if you switch over to another, and the other shoots you up if you don't."

He then rang up our own beer-baron's office to mention the matter, and received a reply to the effect that in any case, the usual amount of beer would be delivered every Monday, and the usual sum of money collected every Saturday.

On Williams pointing out that it was derogatory and insulting to the beer-baron that his preserves should be poached upon in this shameless way, that gentleman or his representative did however, add that, in the interests of sport and fair play, he would send Slipper McGinty round on Sunday morning, with instruction to join William and myself behind the bar and shoot it out with the West Side representative and his friends when they came to collect.

This--provided we won the battle--might teach Big Bill Morissy not to butt-in with his beer where he didn't belong.

However, as neither our heart nor our resources were really in the beer business, and we were not out for wealth, notoriety, or trouble, we closed down and quit. We preferred to do wrong by stealth, and would have blushed to find it fame.

Will "Uncle" talk Monday? At any rate, he finds one eager and startled listener. "Limey" Doc, a "shiner"--strange words these!

TRUST COMPANY TO OPERATE ON "THRIFT" FUND

Eastern Institution to Carry Out Features of Proposed Bill

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York.—(CPA)—
With the measure sponsored by Governor Roosevelt for a segregation of "thrift" accounts in New York commercial banks on its death bed, a small local trust company Friday announced its plan to carry out the features of such a bill. It is the first commercial institution to make a voluntary response to the recommendation of the superintendent of banks in this state for separating "thrift" from commercial deposits.

The bank agrees to place all interest or "thrift" monies into a special interest fund and to invest these monies exclusively in securities legal for savings banks.

Unfortunately, the bill at Albany looking to a correction of some of the conditions in banking that have been extremely painful to depositors has become the subject of a political controversy, where as it is entitled to be dealt with on its economic and social merits. It was introduced by a Democratic governor and is opposed by the republican leaders of the New York state legislature, with the chairman of the Republican state committee throwing down the gauntlet to Governor Roosevelt on the "thrift" deposit issue.

Opinion Developing
However, public opinion has been developing very rapidly on this subject in the past six months. It is one that cannot be ignored by bankers or law-makers. While there is no prospect of accomplishing anything in its behalf at the present session of the New York state legislature, the character of the bill is such that it will unquestionably bring about advocates to it in other states where depositors in banks have not had the protection to which they believe themselves entitled.

The solution of the question is likely to lead in the direction of granting greater facilities to savings banks for receiving and investing their deposits, rather than in surrounding the commercial banks with restrictions which would make the acceptance of "thrift" deposits an unprofitable operation. It has been pointed out a number of times in these dispatches that should commercial banks be compelled to invest their "thrift" deposits in the same limited list of securities as is employed by savings banks they would not be able to maintain their present rates of interest and would bring about a condition of scarcity in legal funds resulting in abnormal price limits.

Savings Banks Safer
During 1930, when over 1,300 state and national banks and trust companies failed, the suspension of only one savings bank in the United States was reported. In the debate in Albany Thursday on the "thrift" bill a member of the senate stated that there had not been a failure of a savings bank in New York state since 1877.

In his argument against the bill, Chairman Macy of the Republican state committee indicated that rather than adopt the features of the measure before the legislature, it would be better "that thrift accounts be taken entirely out of commercial banks and lodged in savings banks where they belong." He also said that it would be well to face the situation frankly "and endeavor to work for a method whereby savings deposits may be segregated in savings banks and commercial deposits in commercial banks." This after all, is the essence of the legislation which the governor of New York state have been trying to impress on their stubborn political opponents.

Savings bank deposits in New York in March showed increases, but not to the extent of those in the earlier months of the year or in December when depositors in commercial banks were withdrawing their funds and placing them in savings banks. The latter are still having difficulty in finding a satisfactory outlet for their funds. They have large deposits in their correspondent banks at 15 per cent interest. At the same time they are paying their own depositors 4 to 4 1/2 per cent. The trend throughout the east toward a reduction in rates of deposits on checking accounts and also on "thrift" accounts is growing. It is gaining considerable force in New Jersey and in the territory around Philadelphia.

FLASHES OF LIFE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
London.—All British army and Red Cross nurses have to practice with gas masks. When an alarm is sounded they put on masks and get on to trenches in treating wounded in smoke simulating poison gas.
Gov Shaw, Labor war minister, ordered the practice, "anticipating the terrors of future war."

Portes on Re, France.—Letter carriers on the island of Re have hard time with poor handwriting. Of the 460 inhabitants of this village 38 are named Renault.

London.—One needs a password to telephone the king at Buckingham palace. A call is switched first to the Lord Chamberlain. He alone is supposed to share the secret with members of the royal family. Time was when servants knew the word and it leaked. The system was changed after the king picked up the receiver to be asked "does your majesty think women should have the vote?"

Aachen, Germany.—Coal miners take less stock in soothsayers now. Shortly after fatalities in an explosion a clairvoyant predicted another disaster at a particular time. No miners appeared for work then. Many of their wives had changed the alarm clocks so they would be late. Nothing happened.

"ARIES"

If April 13th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a. m. to 9:45 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. The one danger period is from 3 p. m. to 5:45 p. m.

You guiding star will have dim reflections on this date, but "for him who loves and for him who aspires, life may lead through the thorns, but it never stops in the desert." Do not heed pessimistic doubts.

The child born on this April 13th will have a self-willed, defiant nature, and whether these traits of character will be refined into dignity and self-reliance, or debased into arrogance and despotism, is the problem of their possessor's destiny. Although not a lovable child, it will respond quickly to affection, and will be loyal to those who have won its respect and love.

If born on April 13th, you are one of those people who are best described by the word "harmonious." People never set your teeth on edge, or rub you up the wrong way. Yet you are not over-meat, unpleasantly amiable, or without firm convictions. Your natural effervescence of spirit cheers, but does not inebriate. Be you man or woman, you are the light of your home. In spite of, and not always because of, external conditions, you manage to be happy, and to find things of interest about you. You have strong likes and dislikes, but you only freely air the former.

You are quick to sense a grain of humor if it can be found in a load of tragedy. Because of your great self-control, you are a good leader or "boss." You take your full share of a burden, and are willing to do more in order to help some one else. You are quite a determined being, but you are diplomatic, and win your way through gentle methods. You never cry over a "spill", but are more careful next time.

You are only moderately ambitious, and you prefer comfort to power and contented obscurity to fame. You will not have many intimate friends, but you enjoy sociable relationships with many people of both sexes. You will relinquish the reins of ardent responsibility rather early in life, from choice, not necessity.

The astrological indications of April 14th point to a day of effort with a barrenness of result. Much will be attempted; little accomplished. Those who are wise will be content with the discharge of routine duties. After sunset, there will be a soothing atmosphere, propitious for lovers.

A child born on this April 14th will be naturally kind and have a sweet disposition. Its thoughts will be centered on its home and those whom it shelters. Rather than cause trouble, it will gladly shoulder others' responsibilities; it will, of course, be imposed upon. It is assured a fair degree of success. Were you born on April 14th? If so, your horoscope says that you are not only attractive, but fascinating.

STATE PLANS JOB AGENCIES AT CROSSINGS

Bids for Construction to Be Taken at Madison on April 21

Madison.—(P)—Employment agencies will be established by the state industrial commission near each of the grade separation projects to be undertaken by the state unemployment commission, according to an announcement by Herman L. Ekern, Madison, chairman.

Mr. Ekern also announced that bids for the construction of 14 over-head crossings and three subways will be taken by the commission April 21 at Madison. All are for grade separations on the North Western railroad's lines.

Contracts will be awarded as other highway contracts are let except that certain restrictions will be placed upon contractors insofar as the employment of labor is concerned. Unemployed men will apply at the employment agencies to be set up by the commission near each project.

To obtain a job on grade crossing work, the applicant must have resided in Wisconsin for five years or more, must have dependents to support and must show evidence of regular employment prior to January, 1930.

"The industrial commission will arrange to assist those looking for work in filling out the necessary questionnaire, which will enable the commission to determine whether or not the applicant is entitled to consideration," Mr. Ekern said. "Each applicant, if qualified for such position, will be given a card entitling him to consideration by the contractor, who will employ the required number of men. An effort will be made to give preference to those applicants who have the largest family obligations and are in the greatest need of work."

Mr. Ekern said the state highway commission will have a large force of engineers at work on the plans and specifications for the projects in order that work may be undertaken immediately.

The project on which bid will be taken April 21 are:

- Rosemead over-head, U. S. Highway Nos. 10 and 141. Northwest of Manitowoc, Manitowoc-co.
- Fond over-head, State trunk highway 55, Milwaukee-co.
- Wittenberg over-head, State trunk highway 23, Village of Wittenberg, Shawano-co.

- North Tomah over-head, U. S. Highway No. 12, East of North Tomah, Monroe-co.
- Hushler over-head, State Trunk Highway No. 38, Northwest of Racine, Racine-co.

NO APOLOGY FOR MY PUBLIC LIFE, WALKER STATES

New York Mayor Says He Never Pulled Down Another to Elevate Self

New York.—(P)—Mayor Walker, whose administration has become the subject of an investigation by the state legislature, threw out a challenge to his opponents last night. "I come to you with no apology for my public life," he said at a dinner of the Jewish Theatrical guild. "I come to you asking no quarter. I come to you without propaganda and without an ill feeling to any individual in this city. I am, if I may say so in your presence, guilty of many shortcomings as men in public life go. But when that list shall have been completed there will not be included selfish political ambition that ever would permit me to trample

Highway No. 100, West of West Allis, Milwaukee-co.

Lake George over-head, U. S. Highway No. 8, East of Rhineland, Oneida-co.

Butler subway, State Trunk Highway No. 119, South of Butler, Milwaukee-co.

Buffalo subway, U. S. Highway No. 61, North of Portage, Marquette-co.

upon another in the hope of elevating myself."

In a lighter vein the mayor suggested possible reasons for opposition to him. "If others dislike his clothes he said, "I find some personal consolation that I am up to date with my tailor." And, he added, "I may not grouch quite as much as the plans and specifications for the proverbial statesman require."

It was the first social gathering which the mayor has attended since his return from California. Newspapers attached importance to his address because his audience included a score of political figures, among them John F. Curry, leader of Tammany hall, and John H. McCooey, leader in Brooklyn.

It is not expected that the inquiry will begin for some time. The annual report of the police commissioner, Edward P. Mulrooney, a volume of more than 200 pages records 421 cases of murder and manslaughter, an increase of 61, or 15 per cent, over the previous year. Family difficulties and love affairs accounted for 197 violent deaths, differences of opinion between underworld characters for 80, compromises with 46 gangsters, 14 gamblers, 8 labor racketeers, 7 bootleggers, 2 slot machine racketeers, 2 narcotic dealers and one black hander.

Despite this roll call of death, there was a decrease of 4 per cent in crimes of violence, a heading which also includes burglary and felonious assault.

Milwaukee.—(P)—A gusty wind is believed to have been responsible for overturning a canoe in the Milwaukee river here yesterday, resulting in the drowning of Henry George, 27. His companion, Luther Kent, managed to swim to shore despite a strong under current. George's body was recovered.

SALE APPROVED OF MINONG'S UTILITY

Madison.—(P)—The sale of the village of Minong's municipal electric utility property to the Dahlbergh Light & Power company for $2,000 has been approved by the railroad commission.

The commission, in another order, dismissed the complaint of the Waukesha Motor company against the North Western railroad. The motor company claimed the rate of eight cents per hundred pounds on rough iron forgings alleged to be charged by the railroad was excessive.

Four certificates for the operation of passenger auto transportation companies were issued by the commission. They were:

To the Wisconsin Public Service corporation for operating between Green Bay and Bay Beach park in the town of Freire.

To the Wisconsin Northern Transportation Co., Inc., Rice Lake, for operating between Superior and Eau Claire.

To Edward C. Piotrowski, Stevens Point, for operating on Stevens Point streets and to Water Works park.

To Nat Kinney, Stevens Point, for operating between Stevens Point and Wisconsin Rapids.

SUCH VIGILANCE!

Superior, Wis.—Sheriff Frank Carlson can't keep an eye day and night, so he's asked the county board to appropriate enough money to put up screens over the county jail's barred windows. Someone has been smuggling liquor in to the prisoners despite Carlson's efforts to nab the bootleggers.

STOCK MARKET MOVES UPWARD AS WEEK OPENS
Bearish Efforts Cause Some Recession During Early Trading
BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER Associated Press Financial Editor
New York (AP) - The stock market began the new week today with a vague upward flutter. Bearish efforts caused some recession during the early trading, but failed to impede important selling, and the list soon reflected short covering. Tobacco's and utilities were leaders of the advance. Radio was brought forward. Trading remained listless, however, and professional traders moved cautiously. American Tobacco "B" rose about 4 points to within the neighborhood of its 1930 high. Allied Chemical rallied as much, and issues going up two points or more include American Water Works, American Power and Light, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman, Case and McKeesport. Auburn showed up, and the market reached another new high since 1929. Radio was a feature of the medium-priced group, rising nearly 2 points. There were numerous gains of a point or so. The steels, however, failed to participate. Vanadium was a bear target during the first hour, when it was pushed down 4 points. It failed to rebound notably when the list turned upward. Strength in American Tobacco was accompanied by unconfirmed rumors of an increase in wholesale cigarette prices, as a sequel to the recent ending of the so-called price cutting war by two tobacco stock chains. There was considerable difference of opinion in financial quarters, however, as to how well grounded these rumors may be. There was nothing new to account for the strength of Radio, although the fact that the company had been in the first quarter was relatively satisfactory, which presumably means only that preferred dividends were earned, as contrasted to a deficit during the early part of last year. The sluggishness of the steel shares apparently reflected the growing belief that the peak operations of the year had been reached, and that the steel industry would not be definitely known until Wednesday's reviews appear, the estimate for youngsters showing a recession from 45 to 44 per cent of capacity, and the closing of its rail mill by Colorado fuel and iron, may be straws in the wind. Incidentally, youngsters producing a disconcerting number of publishers' weekly rates of operation, which may tend to leave Wall Street a little more in the dark than previously. The rail shares stiffened a little, although southern railway sagged to still another new low for the past seven years. Advance estimates of freight car loadings for the week ended April 4 indicate another moderate recession from the preceding week. Credit conditions remained about steady, with call money at 1 1/2 per cent, both officially and in the outside market.

SUPPLIES MOUNT ON LIVESTOCK MARKET
Chicago Yards Receive More Than 1,500 Carloads in Early Runs
Chicago (AP) - Local stockyards received more than 1,500 cars of live stock today, liberal cattle receipts swelling the total volume of business and establishing a maximum for the three weeks. The run of 25,000 cattle, largest since Dec. 1, was supplemented by a supply of 4,000 calves. Demand for bovine stock was not adequate to clear general offerings and lower prices were quoted for all classes of cattle. The spring tide of calves was about at its peak, 17,000 of them being offered in eleven leading markets, against 18,400 a week ago. Hog receipts here of 42,000 were substantially the same in point of numbers as on the previous Monday, but the river market had larger supplies and some of the eastern markets attracted shipping orders diverted from Chicago. Prices sagged, selling of 170-210 lb. animals at 7.75 to 7.85 being generally 10 to 20 under Friday's levels. Packers received 16,000 hogs direct and 2,000 state hogs were carried over from the final session last week. Packing plants received for 6,343 lambs of the total supply of 19,000 estimated. Over 200 cars of stock arrived late and many of them carried sheep and lambs. Developments came slowly in the sheep sheds, with no great change in prices during the forenoon.

BIG GAIN IN CIRCULATION AT LIBRARY

17,326 More Volumes Distributed in 1930 Than in 1929

A gain in circulation in 1930 of 17,326 books, or an average monthly increase of 1,443 volumes is reported by Miss Florence Day, librarian at the Appleton public library, in her annual report. The book stock was increased by 2,099 volumes, and the registration list by 560.

Figures over a 10-year period show a 135 per cent gain in book stock, a 98 per cent increase in registration, and a 148 per cent gain in circulation. During these 10 years the population of Appleton increased from 19,561 persons to 25,262, a gain of 29 per cent. In 1920 there were 14,347 volumes in the library, 5,550 names on the borrowers' list, and 11,600 books were circulated. In 1930 the library shelves held 33,725 volumes, there were 10,648 borrowers, and the circulation mounted to 177,642.

The per capita circulation in 1930 was over 7 books, and the service expenditure per volume of circulation was a little more than 10 cents. The library still lacks 4,168 books of the number recommended by the American Legion Community survey for a 24 per capita stock. The money available for public library purposes $18,621 is not equal to the $1 per capita, American Library association minimum for efficient library service. The local library, lacking $6,941 for the figure set by the association, should have one staff member for every 20,000 volumes circulated, or 83 workers. The library has only six staff members.

Department Develops
The children's department has developed considerably in the past year, the circulation increasing from 47,801 in 1929 to 51,219 in 1930. Of this number 31,566 were fiction books and 19,754 non-fiction. The entire children's collection has been reshuffled, a new system of packet books for schools instituted, and story hours held every Saturday morning since August. The librarian reported that the children's department is inadequate to serve the large juvenile patronage.

An increased use of the library by adults is mentioned in the report. Circulation figures are soaring, and reading rooms are crowded to capacity, partly due to the large number of unemployed persons who pass their leisure time at the library. Some come to read, some to consult the want ads in the newspapers, and many merely to find a place where they can keep warm and be asked no questions, Miss Day points out.

Because of the small appropriation of $500 granted by the county board for the library, it has been necessary to discontinue all county stations. County borrowers are allowed the same privileges as those which the city patrons enjoy, but no collections of books are located throughout the country. There are now 28 school deposit libraries in existence, but only one industrial station. Formerly there were stations at the City Home, county jail, and in several paper mills, but now the only one is at the Wisconsin Telephone company.

Smaller Funds
The results of the present financial depression have penetrated public libraries, Miss Day explains, producing an unfortunate economic condition where appropriations are smaller and business greater. The city appropriation for the local library was cut this year from $17,500 to $16,500.

Total of $4,647.69 was expended on books for the library last year. Periodicals cost $516.19, binding $501.31, salaries, $9,653.40, and improvements $1,540.37. Total expenditures were $19,162.25. A balance of $594 will be used to bind back files of the Appleton Post-Crescent. Fines during the year brought $724.06, and rents $171.25.

At the beginning of the year there were 31,626 volumes in the library. A total of 2,615 books added, and 516 were withdrawn, leaving the number at the end of the year 33,725.

With the registration of 3,081 new borrowers during the year, and the cancellation of 2,582, the total number of borrowers changed from 10,648 at the beginning of the year to 14,347 at the end.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headache, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c. Adv.

$300 or Crippled for Life
(a true experience)

THE family doctor shook his head, sadly. There was nothing more that he could do. It looked as though that terrible accident would cripple little Alice for life unless money could be obtained to take her to a specialist, a certain surgeon in a city not so far away.

The distracted parents did not know where to turn . . . but, fortunately, the doctor did. He advised going to Household for a loan.

Now Alice walks again, like other children. For Household loaned her parents the needed $300. It was a simple business-like transaction. Only their signatures were asked—no co-makers or outside endorsers. No embarrassing investigations were made. And the charges were almost a third less than the lawful rate, with twenty months to repay.

Should your family ever need $50 to $300, for any good reason, you are invited to 'phone, call at the nearest Household office, or use the coupon below.

PRESENT GERMAN PLAYS AT CHURCH HALL ON TUESDAY

Lawrence Language Students to Raise Money for Scholarships

The German club of Lawrence college will present two one-act plays at the Zion Lutheran church auditorium on Wednesday and One-acts on April 14. These plays are given for the purpose of raising money for scholarships for German students. The plays to be given this year are "Die Kleinen Verwandten" by Ludwig Thomas, and "Frühling im Winter" by Ludwig Fulda.

In "Die Kleinen Verwandten," Mrs. Henry Haessler, eager to marry her daughter, Ida, to Max Schmitt, a young merchant of promise, is making preparations for his visit. She gives very minute instructions regarding the actions of her daughter and her husband, a government official. Every thing is in readiness for the arrival of the innocent victim. Suddenly the door-bell rings and in comes Babette, the sister of Henry Haessler, with her newly-wedded husband. It appears that Babette had married below her station and was regarded as the traditional poor relation. The couple are given a very chilly reception. However Babette is not in the least impressed with her inferior worth, not is she at all submissive. She expresses, with many cutting remarks, her opinion of the snobbishness and hypocrisy of German officialdom as represented by her brother. In spite of the very evident attempt of the Haesslers to make an end to the call, Babette because she remains. Soon Max Schmitt arrives. Then the fun begins.

In "Frühling im Winter," Count Manfred von Eichhofen, who has traveled all over the world, decides that there is nothing worth living for anymore. He goes to see Baroness Leonie von Schildegg, a former sweetheart for the last time. She discovers his desire to end his weary existence and determines to awaken his interest in life in spite of himself. She sends him to deliver some Christmas presents to a poor family. When he returns, they have tea and talk over old times. He becomes very interested and happy. When he is about to leave, she tells him that she has drugged the tea because she knew that he wanted to die in a painless way and that she did this because of her affection for him. The resulting action is wholly unexpected however. It is a big surprise.

Despite the typhoon damage in January the Philippines' sugar production this season will be as great as last year.

Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS DISCUSS STATE MEET

Directors of the Y. M. C. A. will discuss the coming state convention of the association Monday evening. The convention will be at Kenosha in May. The board also will hear reports from local association employed officers, and review the financial report for the first three months.

Boreraig, Scotland, is to have a monument to famous bagpipe players.

"Two Years Since I Had a Headache"

Says Florence Sherman of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Calif. — "For years I suffered with splitting headaches," says Miss Florence Sherman of this city. "I tried everything for relief, but nothing did more than temporary good. Finally I went to my doctor. He attributed the cause to constipation, and prescribed Pluto Water—a small dose each morning, diluted in hot water. That was two years ago. Since then, thanks to Pluto, I have never had a headache from this cause."

Pluto Water is more than a relief for constipation—although it is in that connection that it is best known. Pluto Water will relieve the most stubborn case in from thirty minutes to two hours; but, taken regularly each morning (a small quantity in hot or cold water) it will keep the system regular, help ward off many serious complaints. Try it today. Pluto Water is bottled at French Lick Springs, Ind., and is sold at drug stores and fountains everywhere.
